C. of C. Acts
Support Issue

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce have urged citizens to approve a bond issue for water and sewage system improvements.

Chamber manager Jim Musick made the announcement yesterday at a Chamber luncheon membership meeting. He read the resolution to the 32 members and guests present.

Henry C. Maddox, Jefferson City, director of Missouri's Commerce and Industrial Development department, outlined the broad acres an industry investigates before locating in a new site.

"There are more than 600 factors an industrialist considers in a town," he said, "and there are 15,000 organizations like this Chamber of Commerce (across the nation) dedicated to bringing new business to their community."

The speaker then reminded the group of a national study last year which showed that 150 new industries located last year. "That means," Maddox explained, if you are an average town, getting your average, and doing average, a new industry will locate in Sikeston once every 100 years."

To "beat the averages" the director said a community must have "something in it that will attract an industry." Something more than meeting the educational requirements, governmental functions, and normal growth rate is needed, he said.

"The community must have a spirit of progress. There must be a constant drive by the community's leaders to improve and to progress. The local leadership must sell the city and prepare the community for industrial development," Maddox said.

Top Hearnes Money Lid

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House tackled compromise appropriation bills today exceeding Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' general revenue budget of about $3.6 million.

Rep. Bernard (Doc) Simcoe, D - Callaway, House appropriations chairman, said the final figures would be less than $5 million over the governor's recommendations.

That would include $10 million in the final catchall bill to cover extra state aid for schools as suggested by the governor. The bill boosting the foundation program formula by that amount was passed by the House and sent to the governor's desk Thursday.

Originally the House wanted to allot $24.5 million extra for school aid but the governor said the state couldn't afford that.

The conference committee agreement made few major changes.

"There wasn't too much difference between the two houses," said Sen. J. F. Patterson, D - Caruthersville, Senate appropriations chairman. "There wasn't a lot of room to argue."

Without the $17 million odd in the final catchall bill, the major money bills as compromised carry $265,963,000 from general revenue, or $3,650,000 more than the governor recommended.

This does not include fees and federal funds which are expected to raise the total one-year budget to something around $875 million.

Alabama Police Join Search

CAPE GIRARDEAU — As Huntsville, Ala., police continued their search for two men and two women reportedly seen the day Elizabeth Ann Gill vanished, the total reward money offered has climbed to $1,695.

According to Police Chief Irvin E. Beard, the four were last seen in a late model Thunderbird and a Chevrolet pickup with Alabama license plates originally issued to other vehicles. Alabama law requires license plates to remain on the vehicle to which they were issued.

The two couples were reportedly selling purses door to door, and were not seen after Betsy disappeared June 13.

Cape Girardeau police have checked leads from Baltimore, Md., to Dallas, Tex., since the child vanished, but each has produced nothing.

According to Frank H. Selly, CD director, the check is 75 per cent of the eligible amount; the remaining 25 per cent will be issued when a federal audit is made.

Orders All Papers Close

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP-- Premier Nguyen Cao Ky threw a brick into a political hornet's nest when he ordered all 36 of Saigon's Vietnamese-language newspapers to close July 1.

For sheer political audacity, the new military premier's action Thursday was unequaled, even under President Ngo Dinh Dien's dictatorship.

Each newspaper is essentially the organ of a political faction or pressure group. Most publishers are also leading political figures.

The Roman Catholics, the Buddhists, the Cao Daists and the Hoa Haos also have their newspapers.

Since Diem's overthrow in 1963, the Saigon government has changed five times. Each time, the press has played a big role. The bulk of the newspapers opposed each government.

This was probably the major factor in Ky's decision to play rough. By closing all papers for one month, until they can be reorganized along lines satisfactory to the government, he avoids the risk of showing partiality to any faction.

Ky decreed that during July there would be two official newspapers -- one for the "rear" meaning Saigon and one for the "front" presumably meaning the rest of the nation.

Communists Warm Up Old Dispute

BERLIN AP -- The East German Communists threatened today to tie up barge and rail shipments to West Berlin. They also suggested that the four occupation powers give them control of air traffic to West Berlin.

The threat to barge and rail shipments was made by Transport Minister Edwin Kramer in a speech to the Communist party Central Committee published by Neues Deutschland, the party newspaper.

Kramer said permits for barge traffic between West Germany and West Berlin issued by the four occupation powers would not be acceptable after June 30.

He warned that East Germany would take necessary measures if the West German government does not reach agreement with the East German regime by then to establish new procedures.

Concerning rail traffic, the East Germans went to increase freight rates by about 20 per cent, contrary to four-power rules.

The threat of the air corridors came from East Germany's new foreign minister, Otto Winzer, who told the Central Committee the Berlin Air Safety Center which controls the air routes lost its basis of operation when the Allied Control Council for Berlin ceased to function in 1948.

After the council ceased to operate, the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union continued to operate the Air Safety Center.

The military operations along the superhighway subsided Thursday night. Western diplomats were puzzled about its meaning, but the West German government said the situation was serious and called for countermeasures.

Four Injured In Accidents

The highway patrol of troop E reported four persons were injured in two area automobile accidents yesterday.

In an accident on highway A, three miles east of Uniontown at 2:30 p.m., a 1956 Chevrolet driven by Harold Heise, 35, Uniontown, and a 1964 GMC truck, driven by Donald J. Manning, 30, Perryville sideswiped. The impact caused the truck to run off the road and hit a tree.

Injured were Heise and his son Ricky, four, the father received arm cuts, and the son head cuts. Manning received head cuts and an arm injury. All were taken to the Perry County Memorial hospital in Perryville.

In a single car accident on Route N, six miles north of Charleston, at 3:15 p.m., Renda Ward, 18, Poplar Bluff, suffered a mild concussion. She was a passenger in a 1964 Volkswagen, driven by Freda Wilkerson, 25, Charleston. She was taken to a Charleston clinic and released.

The accident occurred as the car was rounding a curve and met another car. The Volkswagen struck loose gravel, skidded and overturned.

Johnson Truman Confer

KANSAS CITY AP -- President Johnson marked the 20th birthday of the United Nations today by conferring here with Harry S. Truman, who was chief executive when the U.N. was born.

Johnson told reporters he and Truman "talked about our problems in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic." He said they also reminisced about some of Truman's historic acts as chief executive.

Truman, beaming, said that "in my historic memory" no president ever made a greater impact than Johnson during his first months in the White House.

From Missouri, Johnson was bound for San Francisco to address U.N. anniversary ceremonies.

The chief executive, rising early, visited the coffee shop of the Muehlebach Hotel, where he spent the night, about 6 a.m. He sat down for his morning coffee then embarked on a stroll.

Johnson personally greeted scores of shopkeepers and pedestrians during his stroll.

Today was the first meeting between Johnson and Truman since the President called on Truman at a Kansas City hospital last Oct. 21 while Truman was recovering from a fall.

Redistricting In Tangle

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- The problem of House redistricting is all tangled up again in the Missouri Legislature.

The Senate refused to accept a compromise version Thursday that would have allowed a 168-member House to reapportion itself every 10 years. That headed the issue for a new try at conference committee settlement.

Opponents defeated the first plan 12-21. They advocated a system, recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, of setting up a bipartisan commission to do the redistricting job. That is the way the Senate is being revamped now.

Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, said he understood the Senate Redistricting Commission will not submit its report until the people act on the proposed constitutional amendment setting up a 168-member House --five more members than at present.

Waters said he had heard a special election on the constitutional amendment would be held in August or as soon as the legal requirements can be met.

The basic difference is that House wants to redistrict itself and the Senate opponents of the plan say a bipartisan commission could do a fairer job with less gerrymandering.

Congress Wins Praise

"This 89th Congress will leap into history as the most effective and the most rewarding Congress in the history of our nation," Johnson told 2,500 Democrats crowded into a hotel ballroom Thursday night.

Then he moved on to the Washington Armory, where well over 6,000 diners were jammed in — at $100 a plate — to eat charcoal-broiled heart of filet mignon and hear some political talk.

Democratic officials said about 8,800 people attended the twin dinners.

Silver Coin Cut Approved By Senate

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate has passed a bill which would eliminate silver from dimes and quarters and cut the silver content of half dollars.

Passage came late Thursday on a 74-9 vote. The bill was sent to the House, where a similar measure may come up for debate next week.

Under the Senate bill, the 90 per cent silver content of the half dollar would be reduced to 40 per cent, as requested by President Johnson. The House bill, which also would remove the silver from dimes and quarters as asked by Johnson, includes an amendment which would eliminate all of the silver from half dollars.

The President had called for the reduction of silver in coins on June 3. In a special message to Congress, he urged quick action in view of the rapidly diminishing Treasury stock of silver. He also expressed concern that a prolonged debate might encourage the hoarding of silver coins.

Western senators made six unsuccessful efforts to revise the bill more to their liking.

But their key proposal, to keep 40 per cent silver in the dime and quarter as well as the half dollar, was rejected 57 to 34.

The new dimes and quarters are not expected to come into use until next year. With a copper core and coated with an alloy of nickel and copper, they will resemble a nickel in surface appearance but will be unchanged in size. Present vending machines will accept these, the Treasury says.

Viet Cong Execution

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The Viet Cong has executed U.S. Army Sgt. Harold George Bennett in reprisal for the execution of several Red terrorists by the South Vietnamese government, Hanoi Radio announced today. It warned that other Americans might suffer the same fate.

"This is obviously a wanton act of murder if this is confirmed," the U.S. Embassy said after hearing the report of Bennett's execution.

On the battlefronts, U.S. spokesmen reported that three more Americans were killed over the past 24 hours, a fourth was missing and six were wounded.

Bennett, son of Pauline H. Bennett of Perryville, Ark., was captured Dec. 29 during the battle of Binh Gia, which cost an estimated 200 South Vietnamese lives

All Are Believed Killed

EL TORO, Calif. AP -- The Marine air station here said the wreckage of a C135 Military Air Transport Service jet transport carrying 72 Marines and 12 Air Force personnel was found today approximately 4 1/2 miles north of here. There was no report of survivors.

The downed plane was located in mountainous terrain between El Toro and Irvine Lake.

Rescue aircraft and vehicles have been dispatched to the area, a spokesman at the air station said.

The plane left El Toro, a Marine base, at approximately 2:45 a.m. today and radar contact was lost shortly thereafter. It was bound for Honolulu, Hawaii.

The Air Force said the jet aircraft, the military version of the Boeing 707, was based at McGuire Air Force base in New Jersey.

No Boycott By Doctors

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Medical Association has decided not to urge doctors to boycott Medicare, and AMA leaders have restated their willingness to discuss the program with President Johnson.

But the 234-member House of Delegates, policy-making body of the AMA, rejected a resolution "petitioning" Johnson for a conference on the administration bill that appears near final congressional approval.

At the final session of the annual AMA convention, the house advised each doctor to be guided by his conscience on how to face Medicare, long fought by the AMA.

Child's Death Held Accidental

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday after a coroner's inquest into the shooting of Shiela Diane Ergle, eight, of Rockford, Ill.

The child was shot in the chest Tuesday. She was visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Sally Reese, 134 Sixth St., when she was shot.

The 12-gauge shotgun was loaded with small game ammunition, according to Chief of Police Arthur Bruce.

Scott county prosecuting attorney Fielding Potashnick said the girl was shot by a seven-year old boy playmate at approximately 2 p.m.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Matthews Baptist Church with burial in a Matthews cemetery.

Governor Dies

JUNEAU AP -- B. Frank Heintzleman, 77, territorial governor of Alaska from 1953 until 1957 who devoted nearly 50 years of his life to the economic development of Alaska, died Thursday.

Democrats Chuckle At GOP Squabble

Ousted GOP aide William Cody Kelly said party chairman Ray C. Bliss first praised him, then announced he had fired him for an evening foray into the office of the party finance director.

Kelly said working at Republican headquarters is more dangerous than fighting a war.

Frank J. Kovac, the finance man, said Wednesday that Kelly and three other party aides broke open his locked desk in the interoffice raid a week ago.

Bliss said he demanded and got Kelly's resignation because "he has taken action which is contrary to standards which I have established for my staff."

President Johnson and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey needled the Republicans about the whole thing.

"I checked out my desk tonight before I left," Johnson told a party fund-raising dinner Thursday night, "and I'm sure it's locked and no one is going to get into it."

"Kelly is the fellow that used the hairpin to get into the vault," said Humphrey. "I hate to say it, but a man with that name ought to be a Democrat."

The vice president said Kelly might have been a Democratic agent, looking for lists of Republican donors.

Second Man Captured

JASPER, Ark. (AP) — The second of three men wanted in connection with a bank robbery was captured near hear early today.

Bruton, 25, of Branson, Mo., said he had been without food for almost 72 hours.

Bruton, Larry Dale Peckham, 23, of Wichita, Kan., and Chester L. Durbin, home town unavailable, have been charged with robbing a bank at Mountain View of $2,500 early Wednesday.

Route Opens

The highway department announced that route AA, one mile south of the intersection of Interstate Route 55 and 57, will be open in the morning.

100 Greet President

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Probably less than 100 citizens were at Municipal Airport this morning to see President Johnson off for San Francisco.

It was difficult to make an accurate estimate because there were so many newsmen, and others directly concerned with the President's trip, in the crowd. However, people had been lined five and six deep around his hotel as he departed.

Johnson first helped former president Harry S. Truman into the car, then walked across the street and made his way to the end of the block shaking hands — sometimes with both hands at the same time.

Finally Johnson got into the back seat of the car with Truman and Sen. Frank Carlson. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, sat in front with the driver and a secret service man.

Blast Rips Cafe

SAIGON, Viet Nam. AP -- A mighty explosion -- possibly caused by three separate terrorist bombs -- ripped through a crowded floating restaurant on the Saigon River tonight. Witnesses said they believe up to 40 persons, including many Americans, were killed.

Officials said their first count showed 17 persons dead and 24 wounded. They expected this tally to go higher.

Some of the casualties were mothers and their children who had been strolling along a riverside boulevard when the explosion roared out at 8:15 p.m.

U.S. police officials at the scene said that a "shape charge" which explodes in a predetermined position like a Claymore mine, was probably the main explosive. That charge was believed to have been placed at the riverbank near a gangblank leading to the restaurant.

Authorities believe there were two other explosions, both of them bicycle bombs. One of these loaded bicycles probably was parked beside a riverside stall in front of the floating restaurant, the My Canh, and the other on the other side of the boulevard.

Witnesses at the explosion scene said 10 bodies were stacked up on the approach to the My Canh restaurant. An estimated 20 more were inside the restaurant itself.

Witnesses said many of the dead appeared to be Americans, and that it probably was the bloodiest and costliest terrorist blast against Americans in South Viet Nam.

UN Keynote By Johnson

SAN FRANCISCO AP -- U.N. diplomats looked hopefully today to President Johnson to keynote the world organization's 20th birthday celebration with a plan for ending its financial crisis and rebuilding its sagging prestige.

The President is to address the delegates of 114 countries in the San Francisco Opera House where the U.N. Charter was drafted two decades ago.

Johnson's speech was scheduled for 12:30 p.m.

Although the contents of his speech were not released in advance there was widespread belief that a major theme would be the difficulties of the United Nations and possible action to strengthen the organization.

Greece's U. N. ambassador, Alexis S. Liatis, agreed with Secretary - General U Thant and others that the financial crisis was the most urgent problem facing the United Nations at the moment and said: "We all expect something tomorrow morning from President Johnson."

Observers agreed that the atmosphere was far different from the optimism in San Francisco in 1945, but they noted a brighter outlook than that of a few months ago.

Drainage Plan Up For Vote

CHARLESTON -- A pumping station to drain the northeastern corner of Mississippi County will be constructed if voters in levee district No. 3 approve a $300,000 bond issue July 27.

The voting will be at a special meeting of landowners in the levee district at 10 a.m. at the Wyatt Elementary school.

According to district secretary Jim Bogle, the proposed pumping station would include three 48-inch pumps, and would be located about 100 years north of Pea Field Sewer. Some 30,000 acres of land from Alfalfa Center to the Pea Field floodgate would be provided with better drainage if the plan is approved, he said. Bogle emphasized the bonds would be retired from income from fuse-plug land owned by the levee district. No increase in taxes is involved, he said.

The pumps would be electrically operated, Bogle said, using electricity supplies by the REA.

Engineers William K. Klingner and Associates of Quincy, Ill., prepared specifications for the project. These call for weather-proof electric motors and starting controls and chain link fence around the installation. Each of the three pumps would cost $17,000, and each of three 400-horsepower electric motors would cost $18,000.

The engineers considered diesel operation, Bogle said, but decided that over the 30-year period the electrical operation would be less expensive.

The total amount of electrical equipment is estimated at $156,000, according to the engineering firm, with structure, including construction of a suction bay on the river side of the installation, totalling $170,000. The three pipelines would be laid over the levee, to an underwater point some 240 feet from the pumps.

The plant rating, according to the specifications, is 180,000 gallons per minute.

The proposed pumping plant will be located adjacent to the Pea Field floodgate structure to take maximum benefit of existing drainage structures which empty into the river at that point. As in the past, under normal conditions, this drainage through the existing four 60 - inch corrugated metal drainage pipes will be removed by gravity flow.

However, when a high river blocks the present floodgate structure, the pumps will be started to remove seepage and storm water runoff.

According to the engineering report, the pumps will be started when the interior water level reaches an elevation which would cause crop damage. Pumping will be required at any time the river level is at elevation 300 feet above mean sea level.

A study based on 36 years of Cairo gauge information shows that the number of days pumping required per year would have ranged from 30 in 1940 to 188 in 1951. During 1941 and 1954 no pumping would have been required. The average number of days pumping per year during that period would have been 80.

The majority of pumping days were found during the first half of each year, with March and April being the biggest months.

Prepare Shell Of Church For Removal To Fulton

LONDON AP -- The war-blackened shell of St. Mary Aldermanbury Church is being perpared for dismantling and shipment to Fulton, Mo., where it will rise anew as a memorial to Sir Winston Churchill.

The Anglican Church, near the city of London Guildhall, was destroyed by an incendiary bomb during a Nazi air raid in 1941 and was abandoned. The actual dismantling begins in July.

It will be moved to Westminister College in Fulton, where the wartime Prime Minister delivered his famed Iron Curtain speech March 5, 1946. Churchill said in that speech: "From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an Iron Curtain has descended across the Continent. . . . ."

Marshall Sisson, the architect responsible for removing and restoring the church, says the operation will involve numbering each stone before packing for shipment. Total weight of the masonry, some of which is in poor condition, is estimated at 650 tons.

Exterior and supporting columns will be shipped in one vessel across the Atlantic, through the St. Lawrence Seaway, the Great Lakes and then down the Mississippi River to St. Louis. Plaster and woodwork salvage from the interior and some new stained glass windows will follow as a separate shipment.

There are hopes that some form of dedication ceremony can be held at Fulton in time to mark the 20th anniversary of Churchill's speech.

Last year, President Johnson issued an appeal for contributions of $1 1/2 million for the project. The amount collected so far is half that amount.

Thefts, Sex Acts Part Of Teen-Club Rites

Lt. Charles Stoner, head of the Youth Aid Bureau for the metropolitan area, said the group apparently started two years ago "as just a kids' game. But the older the youngsters got, the worse they got. They got away with a few things and, before they knew it, they were in trouble over their heads."

Stoner said Thursday night the club seemingly has a large membership among students at Madison High School serving the suburb east of Nashville.

Most families living in the area are considered middle class but the officer said many of the club members came from well-to-do homes.

The club's activities came to light when a 15-year-old boy was questioned in connection with several automobile thefts. He admitted being a club member.

Stoner said the ringleader of the club-also a 15-year-old boy -- has admitted breaking into "40 to 60 cars in the past two years."

Officers also obtained a file from the boy which contained information on "50 to 60" girls.

"We don't know yet if the girls are members," Stoner says.

With that jaunty declaration, 92-year-old Dr. William Bentley Griggs, still an active physician, conceded there might be some reason for the fuss that's being made over his 71 years of medical practice.

Doctors and laymen will gather at a public meeting in Hahnemann Medical College tonight to honor him, and there will be many felicitations to read, from around this country and from abroad.

"It's quite a lot of frosting to put on the cake of a plain old family doctor," he said in an interview at his combined home and office in suburban Jenkintown. "I have had a bit of experience, though, and I'm always after more.

Slender, alert, the humor of his Scotch-Irish blood ever-present, Dr. Griggs ranged over a variety of subjects, expressing his views with an animation characteristic of far younger men.

"As long as my mind is clear --and it is now, I assure you-- I'll not retire," he said. "After 90 I did slow up a bit. I take only office calls now, and have cut down on the number of patients. But I'm still a doctor.

"Retire at 65? Nonsense. My judgment and perception were at their best when I was 65, in my last years of teaching at Hahnemann Medical College. I wouldn't be where I am now if I had retired at 65 --or 75."

Dr. Griggs' first wife died in 1945. In 1958 he married Irene Smith, a widow, over whose birth he presided.

"I won't soon forget how we first met," said the doctor.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Friday, June 25 is Bluebeard's Wedding Anniversary.

Mrs. Warren E. Hearnes, the attractive wife of the governor is not only an accomplished musician but is getting as much favorable attention from the press as her husband. She is the former Betty Sue Cooper of Charleston, daughter of a Baptist minister.

Her latest triumph was an appearance in New York in which she related how the politics of art can be advanced through the art of politics. In a word, Betty Sue, "wowed" 'em.

She was in Manhattan for a four-day joint conference of the Arts Councils of America and the American Symphony Orchestra League. Almost a thousand delegates attended the session from 40 states and the District of Columbia.

A New York Times reporter described her as "the hit of the day" and described her as the "witty and attractive" woman that Southeast Missouri residents know her to be. She told how state arts council objectives could be advanced through the art of politics.

She recommended a politically inexperienced council work with experienced legislators but urged that a council not become a "political football." She correctly observed that support would come from both political parties. It will because there has been a sharply rising interest in culture in this country during the past decade.

Mrs. Hearnes spoke from successful experience. A state arts council is developing from the current session of the Missouri legislature.

She did more than speak convincingly.

She is a charming and effective ambassador for Missouri. She won the hearts as well as the minds of her listeners.

Writing in the Oregon Voter, Ralph T. Moore says: "There always seems to be an abundance of those who are eternally looking for something for nothing and a scarcity of those who are willing and anxious to put forth the requisite effort to get ahead. Progress exacts its high price from every generation of men. It decrees that man, to progress, must also work hard. This probably explains why progress comes almost always from adversity and almost never from affluence. And yet the whole atmosphere of this so-called war on poverty is to the effect that the key to progress is held by the common government, which in its superior wisdom, now comes forward to save us all from hard, grueling labor by arbitrarily doing away with poverty via fiat and education."

SUMMER JOB DISAPPOINTMENTS

CALIFORNIA will ask for no more out-of-state help for farm harvest work. The announcement by state employment director Albert Tieburg follows the decision to quit work by several "A-Teams" -- Athletes in Temporary Employment as Agricultural Manpower. The withdrawals were triggered by disillusionment over food, living conditions, and pay. Involved on the part of farmers is the federal requirement of a $1.40 an hour wage so long as out-of-state labor is required.

The U. S. Department of Labor in May had expressed surprise at its success in recruiting high school boys for farm labor. Within 10 days, 1,200 high schools had responded to a "picking pickles" recruitment program aimed at a summer labor force of 15,000 to 25,000 high school boys.

DISAPPOINTMENTS ALREADY ARE SHOWING across the country in job programs for the young, both federal and local. After more than 400 applicants had been screened in the Washington, D.C. area Job Corps program -- after five months -- only 32 youths had gone to camp. Some 345 had passed the first hurdle; many were expected to clear the rest of the red tape.

Youth Employment Project officials in Detroit said on June 20 that they had found only 30 of the 70 young men sought for summer training programs aimed at boosting youths into higher-paying jobs. In the same city spokesmen for the Neighborhood Youth Corps, which hoped to find 1,500 youths for a training program by June 15, came up with only 800.

More serious is the New York City disillusionment. With more than 70,000 youngsters out of school, out of work or underemployed, untrained, roaming the streets, very little headway has been made despite a $45 million outlay. By June 15 city and federal officials finally got together on a costly crash program to create more than 20,000 jobs. Whether or not too little, the program is late indeed.

According to the N. Y. Herald Tribune: "HARYOU - ACT and Mobilization for Youth, the new groups which offered so much hope for the future, already have become bogged down amid political, ideological and financial controversy. . . HARYOU-ACT, the massive, multi-million dollar Harlem project, has become a political football between City Hall and Rep. Adam Clayton Powell."

Reasons for disillusionment are many. In California the main complaint was over pay, although harvesters were promised 15¢ more per hour than the $1.25 stipulated under the federal poverty program. In Detroit -- at the $1.25 rate -- the reaction was: "You're crazy, man. I don't work for that kind of money."

Complaints at Job Corps camps ran to training schedules, latrine details, and the like.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON'S Council of Economic Advisers on Jan. 28 warned that absorption of teen-agers into high productivity jobs was the greatest test facing the nation's general economic and manpower policies. The number of teen-agers in the work force is expected to rise by 1 million to 7.5 million by next year.

It's much too early to assess the success of the temporary job training programs instituted in part to take the heat off city police this summer. But the early readings, particularly in the big cities where the pressures engendered by idleness and lack of direction are most dangerous, are hardly encouraging for the long-term view.

WHO IS WATCHING?

A lot of national advertisers have been entranced for years by television's box car audience claims. At last some one outside of the competitive advertising picture has told the Association of National Advertisers that it "ain't necessarily so" when it comes to the audience for commercials. This is just what newspaper salesmen, representatives and publishers have been telling them for years.

Dr. Gary A. Steiner, a professor of psychology at the University of Chicago, told ANA the assumption of a captive audience is an erroneous one:

"We cannot assume that program audience translates with some corrective factor into commercial audience. We can't simply apply an 80 percent, 70 percent or 40 percent figure to say that if we have so many thousands of viewers per dollar to the program, then we have so many fewer thousand viewers to the commercial, even though they may be in the room."

Newspapers discovered this years ago as the result of their own research. Many of them have made surveys of local audiences for highly rated network shows and through sponsor-identification questions found a heavy percentage of "tune-out ear," and the "flush factor," when the commercials came on.

Dr. Steiner noted that "audiences will avoid, fail to see and forget very rapidly those messages that run counter to their motivation, counter to their self-interest, those messages that are boring, threatening, or insulting." And judging from the complaints about television advertising from viewers there is a preponderance of that.

David Lawrence writes in U. S. News & World Report: "The United Nations is no longer an effective international instrument and never will as long as its principal members are unwilling to speak frankly about the paralysis of the organization and act courageously in pressing for solutions. There is no reason why the United States should bear the burden of maintaining peace all over the world. . . What is needed is a leadership among the free nations, which must organize themselves into a broad alliance that will be effective not merely on diplomatic but on economic and military lines. There is enough power in the free world to bring about peace without the needless sacrifice of human lives."

While inflation has cut the purchasing power of the dollar by more than half over the past quarter-century or so, paradoxically the value of money itself, at least in coins, has quintupled.

In 1933, the intrinsic value--the actual value of the metal, which has nothing to do with purchasing power--in 50 pennies was two cents. In 1964 it was 10 cents. The metal value of 10 nickels rose from one cent to five cents in the same period.

And where the metal in five dimes, two quarters or a half-dollar was worth nine cents in 1933, it is now worth 47 cents.

These last three coins, which contain about 90 per cent silver, tell a startling story of our time: Silver is simply becoming too valuable to be used as money.

Only a slight rise in the price of silver would make the intrinsic value of these coins exceed their face value--with a resultant hoarding that could raise hob with the economy.

United States consumption of silver for coins has increased drastically in recent years. Domestic industrial needs have grown less rapidly, but are going up. Add to this the industrial and coinage requirements of other nations.

Since silver is only a small by-product of copper, lead and zinc mining, and the amount that is mined every year is less than half the amount needed, the Free World will register a silver deficit of about 440 million ounces in 1965.

The 1.2-billion-ounce silver stock of the U. S. Treasury Department is the only supply that can make up this deficit. But at present rates of demand, this supply will be used up in three years.

A reduction of the silver content in coins to 30 per cent, as the silver mining industry has urged, would only postpone the depletion of the Treasury stockpile. Worse, it might cause a price rise in silver--or speculation of one--and lead to even worse hoarding than exists today and even the melting down of coins.

The only apparent solution seems to be to mint dimes, quarters and halves out of some nonsilver alloy. But this raises the problem of how to make them work in the nation's millions of vending machines without making the coins too costly to produce or requiring an expensive changeover in vending machine mechanisms.

During its first voyage of twelve months duration, the white hospital ship S. S. HOPE visited Indonesia and South VietNam. Its second voyage carried the ship to Peru for ten months.

Automation continues to toll its casualties. In Cleveland this spring, a man afraid of being fired literally ripped "the brains" out of the county auditor's major computer. And another more subtle individual decided to outwit his machine, a computer that determined automatically who in the company was to get raises and promotions. He merely jimmied the controls. When detected, the company officials took legal action against him. Seems all sorts of inept employes had moved up the administrative and salary scale. Apparently the "big wigs" didn't care to fulfill the stock boys' dreams of becoming president overnight!

H. L. Hunt Says

COMMUNIST POPULARITY

Apparently, tolerance of communism is on the rise, while resistance to communism is ebbing. In fact, the popularity of communism is rising in the United States.

More than coincidence attends the fact that crime is also on the rise in America, for there is now a recognition that communism plays an important part in the current crime wave. With Marxists in the vanguard of militant agitation aimed at destruction of our institutions and our laws, we can expect popularity of Bolshevism to go hand-in-hand with the weakening of the moral code and the erosion of law and order.

When people claim a right to disobey laws with which they disagree, they tear down the foundations of all laws. When they take the path of anarchy to flout their defiance, rather than working through the constitutional system to secure legislative repeal of an unjust or unpopular law, they take a giant step toward the complete mob-rule which is communism.

It is ironic that the rise in tolerance of communism in America comes at a time when some political interpreters envision the Russians converting their own communism into a "liberal" socialism.

Socialism is more dangerous in its "liberal" form than in its communistic state. There is little question about the total force behind a communist government, but "liberal" socialism is more likely to produce new converts and strengthen the Kremlin's stranglehold.

In our own country, liberal socialism has made far greater inroads than has the straight communist approach. The Communist Party, USA, is aware of this fact and has, in recent years, taken a lesson from the success of Fabian socialists. Now the Communist Party stays behind the scenes of "popular" revolts which it helps to create, and chides its Trotskyite brethren for being "too militant." HLH

Doc. Duncan Says

Hal Boyle

KHE SANH, South Viet Nam AP -- Capt. Nguyen Xuan Loc is a man who doesn't like his job but is so good at it they can't let him go on to something bigger.

He has won a kind of "Lawrence of Arabia" reputation in the mountainous northwest corner of this country and military victory if it comes depends on men like Capt. Loc.

He is tall, handsome, quick-witted and speaks good English. Loc, 33, had been an outstanding soldier for 10 years when he was picked to be district chief here. A district chief is roughly equivalent to a powerful county political boss in the United States.

Loc's assignment was a rough one. It was to win over and protect Montagnard tribespeople scattered in a thinly populated area of about 1,800 square miles. It is bordered on the west by Laos and on the north by the demilitarized zone along the 17th Parallel.

The captain is a native Vietnamese born in Hanoi. Giving him the district chief's job was like appointing someone named McCoy as a good-will envoy to the Hatfield family during that famous feud, for the poverty-ridden Montagnards traditionally dislike the Vietnamese and the Vietnamese look down on the Montagnards as illiterate savages.

But there are several hundred thousands of these tribespeople and how they go can have an important effect on this war.

To counter the initial distrust he knew he would meet, Loc appointed a Montagnard as his deputy and put others in important civic and military positions.

He also imported rice to feed the hungry tribespeople, convinced them to try more productive farming techniques and trained them to fight better.

The captain has made an impressive record in 20 months as district chief.

Before he came the Montagnards quickly lost 92 out of 150 weapons issued them by the Vietnamese government but of 250 weapons that he issued he said none had been lost.

"Our Montagnards used to fire only at Vietnamese Viet Cong but not at Montagnard Viet Cong" he said "but I have taught them that if we are to win Montagnards must fire at Montagnards if they are with the enemy.

"I feel that 90 per cent of the Montagnards are now loyal to me. Twice at the risk of their own lives the villagers have warned me of assassination attempts against me."

Loc would like to resume command in the Vietnamese army or take special training in the U. S. Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga., but his is the tragedy of the indispensable man. His present role is so important his superiors are afraid to promote him.

"I am not a politician," said the captain, "I do not like this job but it is my duty and I always do my duty.

"The Montagnards say that if I am replaced by someone they don't like they will turn in their weapons and refuse to help the government. But the people must stay loyal if we are to win."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Dominican Workers Rally To U.S.

Washington, D. C.: -- Propagandists of the bitterly anti-U. S. rebel forces in Santo Domingo are attempting to convince the world that their carefully - planned, three-day general strike was called by national labor leaders and that the scheduled stoppage fizzled because the labor chiefs were arrested.

Fact is that the strike was not called by national Dominican Republic labor leaders. They were not arrested. They are free.

They are serving their people in the capital and the provinces. Had they wished to they could have paralyzed virtually all land and sea transportation. They could have abruptly ended all plantation and farm work. They could have ended garbage collections. They could have shut all factories.

All this the national union chiefs could have accomplished had they wished to aid the rebels. But the union officials repudiated "those who will not return to stability and peace and who are bitterly anti-U.S."

Since these union officials are the leaders of over 105,000 out of the 160,000 unionized Dominican Republic workers, and since their followers stayed on the job and eschewed what was intended to be an anti-American demonstration, it can be assumed that U. S. intervention has been backed by the majority of the Dominican proletariat.

The national union chiefs who urged their people to defy the rebels' general strike call, head the National Confederation of Free Workers -- Conatral.

It was organized in November 1962 by 210 unions. Soon 118 more joined. Today Conatral has 420 affiliated unions.

Because the Conatral is strongly anti-Communist, and because it has refused to join in denouncing the U. S. as "imperialistic," some of its leaders have been assaulted.

Its headquarters at Avenida Mella, 40-42 altos, has been seized by rebel commandos. Its confidential files were carried to the rebels' central intelligence headquarters. Try telephoning its old numbers, 2-5367 and 9-7189, and see who answers.

The Conatral leaders were forced to operate outside the rebel zone. The government of Col. Caamano Deno appointed a minister of labor, Virgilio Meynardi, without consulting the Conatral. Why?

Conatral is the biggest and strongest labor federation on the island. The three unions which called the general strike are puny compared with the Free Workers Confederation.

One of the rebel labor forces is called "FOUPSA." It boasts of 30,000 members, but has less. And it failed to halt a bus, must less paralyze transport. Yet it is the labor movement of Juan Bosch.

In Latin America a politico without a labor movement is like a ball club without bats. Repudiation of FOUPSA is repudiation of ex-President Bosch. No longer can he claim to be talking in the name of the working people of the Dominican Republic.

Two other labor federations joined FOUPSA in the strike call. One, "La Union" has 1,000 members -- maybe. It is traumatically anti-U. S. So is the other Federation "CASC." Its leaders have been denouncing Washington for years.

The three pro-rebel federations also claim that their communications were cut off from the hinterland so the general strike call could not go through. However, I have it from devoted Dominicans that the left-wing unions have cells throughout the villages -- and that couriers were dispatched to the outlying countryside long in advance of the strike call.

This information comes to this column from honorable men in the Dominican Republic. It has never been reported that some 25 mayors of small Dominican cities were in the U.S. in September 1963. Some of them were my hosts in their country.

So, with the gracious assistance of Rockefeller executives, a festive reception was held for the mayors. Many of them have maintained contact with this column ever since. And they will attest to the repudiation of the rebels by the Dominican people.

This should be of significance to those who say America's intervention was resented -- and unilateral.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Twenty years ago, many of the world's statesmen were in San Francisco to sign the charter of the United Nations.

It was a period of great promise and they signed a document of great hope.

I was in San Francisco during part of the formation of the UN and I remember vividly the enthusiasm, the feeling that, despite the mistakes following the 1914-18 "war to end war," we would not make the same mistakes after World War II.

The United States this time would not welsh on the United Nations as it did on the League of Nations. The Senate would not become isolationist again, never would permit a little band of willful men to block the will of the majority in setting up the machinery of peace.

Twenty years have passed since then and today the lustre of the UN charter is tarnished, the earlier hope has dimmed.

There has been no time since the launching of the United Nations that it has been so frustrated, its staff members have felt so sterile.

The reasons are many and the faults are two-sided. They range from a haggle over money to the bypassing of peace-keeping machinery in Southeast Asia to the initial reliance on force in the Dominican Republic.

All of these, with the exception of the Dominican crisis, were inherited by the President. But in the eyes of history that makes no difference. If he fails, all the great programs he has launched at home — education, anti-poverty, improved labor relations — come crashing to the ground.

—ONLY SCENERY UNCHANGED—

After Bernard Baruch died, I went out in LaFayette Park and sat on a bench where he used to sit, looking at the White House. The park hadn't changed much — a rotund lady tourist stretched out on the grass taking a nap; a couple of stenographers snatched a sandwich in the shade; old men snoozed behind their newspapers; and the pigeons Baruch used to feed were still hungry.

Around the White House a new, temporary mesh wire fence was being erected. The old one was getting wobbly and rusty. There was a day when Baruch was in his prime and when I first came to Washington you could stroll through the White House grounds and up to the front door on your way to and from lunch. No guards challenged you on the stroll.

But no more. The problem of guarding the President has become too complex, the risks to his life too great.

This, to some extent, illustrates the complications of guarding the peace of the world, a far more complex job than it was twenty years ago.

Sitting on the bench I recalled one of the last stories told by Baruch to Elroy McCaw, the New York-Seattle TV magnate about the most important advice he had ever given to any president.

Shortly after the end of World War II, Baruch said, he got a telephone call from Gen. George Marshall, then Chief of Staff, later to become Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense. Marshall said he would like to talk to Baruch right away.

"I'll come down and see you," Baruch replied.

"No, I'll come up and see you in about an hour," said Marshall.

—ADVICE NEGATIVE—

When he arrived, Marshall told the elder statesman that President Truman had been worried about the increasing friction between the United States and Russia. There had been shooting between American and Russian troops in Germany and trouble over the access to Berlin. Truman wondered whether the United States might not have to fight Russia eventually and therefore whether it was not better to do so now. At that time the United States had the advantage of the atomic bomb.

Baruch's advice was negative.

"I would be against it for three reasons," he said. "In the first place, the American people are not ready for such a war. They have just finished a long war, with Russia as an ally.

"Second, the world is not ready for such a war. World opinion would never understand it if the United States should attack its ally now.

"Third," concluded Baruch, "it is my opinion that history will line up the United States and Russia on the one side and the Chinese on the other. Our eventual enemy will be the Chinks."

It is obvious from history that Truman and Marshall took Bernard Baruch's advice. And the present drift of history has shown that the chief problem facing Lyndon, the chief stumbling block to peace, as, as Baruch put it in his Manhattanese, "the Chinks."

—RAY OF UN SUNSHINE—

Despite the pessimism that pervades the United Nations on this its 20th anniversary, there are some optimistic phases of its work which the public doesn't know much about which offset the pessimism.

A modern elder statesman, Paul Hoffman, is the diplomatic architect chiefly responsible for this work. As head of the UN Special Fund he is directing 485 projects in some 130 underdeveloped countries and territories, all with money contributed voluntarily by UN members.

They range from development of fisheries in Argentina to irrigation advice for Cambodia to a National Forestry School in Colombia. More than 1,600 international experts carry on this work with around $150,000,000 to be contributed each year by UN members to help smaller nations help themselves.

Hoffman was picked to head the Marshall Plan by the late Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, the onetime Republican isolationist from Michigan who became one of the great champions of international cooperation.

It was a wise choice. Today Hoffman is carrying on the same kind of work, not for the United States alone, but for the United Nations.

—DICTATOR ROJAS MAY STAGE COMEBACK—

Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, another former dictator who governed Colombia with an iron fist for four years and usurped most of the Republic's best cattle ranches while he was at it, may be sitting in Bogota's presidential palace again within a year.

Congressional elections are to be held in March and May of 1966. If Rojas and his new allies — dissident factions of both the liberal and conservative parties — can substantially increase their present strength in the Chamber of Deputies, they will call for President Guillermo Valencia's immediate resignation.

(Valencia, a conservative, was elected in 1962 by both major parties, acting under a "reconciliation pact" signed four years earlier.

(Alberto Lleras Camargo, a liberal, served the first four-year term under the pact, and Valencia is supposed to be followed next year by another liberal.

(However, the national front's handpicked candidate for the succession, Carlos Lleras Restrepo, had to withdraw last month as both parties split and the coalition began falling apart.)

Together, the three-pronged opposition holds 126 of the Chamber's 282 seats. With just 16 more, they would have an absolute majority and could vote Valencia out of office if he refused to quit.

Some Colombian diplomats appointed by Valencia and loyal to the front admit privately that Rojas & Co. are likely to pick up as many as 30 seats — unless the President maintains the state of siege he declared late in May, in which case there will be no elections.

But such action would almost surely bring an uprising by the ex-dictator's followers, and no one is certain what the military would do in that case.

This possibility of total chaos is what Valencia meant when he said, on imposing the stage of siege, that the chances of a Communist takeover in Colombia are strong.

He knows that Colombia's Reds, closely allied with the so-called National Liberation Front in Venezuela, are preparing to attempt a coup if the country's present political confusion gets worse.

And Valencia, like many of his fellow countrymen, fears that Rojas would be quite capable of helping the Communists gain their ends, if he saw his own ambitions temporarily frustrated.

The Modern Christian

Now that Christ is risen, just what is His relationship to us? Christ is not someone who is inert. He is alive and active. Nor are the People of God stagnant, awaiting someone or something to enliven them. The activity of the Risen Christ is the action of the New People of God.

This action of God, the Risen Christ, is the dynamic of the Christian community. The mystery of the Resurrection is with us and we are living together in the risen life.

We do not have risen bodies. This comes in the final age of fulfillment. However, Christ's body is risen and our future life will be fulfilled in a like manner.

We can only be optimal when we realize that the activity of the Spirit, through the Risen Christ, has ushered us into new life. The resurrection of Christ was decision for men. The coming of the Spirit is only a part of this event unfolding itself in time. What God did in Christ, He does also in us.

However, and this is very important, He saves us not by another similar action, but by inserting us into that same mystery of Christ.

By Baptism a man is born into the life that flows from the Resurrection of Christ. We die with Christ, and we rise again to new life. These are not simply words or a promise in the future. This is a relationship with the Risen Christ and a relationship with the Spirit.

Do you remember Paul's promise of unending life to the people of Ephesus. It is the present possession of the Spirit. The Spirit is present in men now.

The Christ of whom we speak and whom we contact through prayer is living, and He is living in all of us today. This same Christ who is living and working in man is the Risen Christ.

BATTLE OF SEXES

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Three housewives in suburban Ferguson, Mo., are unhappy about how the city government is operating and propose to do something about it. They have filed as candidates for the city council to oppose three male incumbents in the April 6 election. Marilyn Soest, mother of six; Anita Gilbert, mother of five; and Ollie Bauer, mother of two, took all 13 children with them when they went to the city hall to file.

When taking small children on a long trip by car, hang a shoe bag on the back of the front seat. Fill with tiny articles such as small books, tiny autos and so on. New articles may be inexpensive. But since they are different from their usual ones, they are likely to hold the attention of weary children for a while and make the trip more pleasurable.

Attend Grand Session Of Job's Daughters

The annual Grand Session of the International Order of Job's Daughters of Missouri was held June 18, 19 and 20 in Kansas City. Installation for the newly elected Grand Bethel was held Friday night and the Sikeston girls assisted over 100 other Honored Queens and Princesses in forming a huge heart around the new officers. In this very impressive ceremony, the Job's Daughters wore their official regalia.

Missouri's Grand Council treated all of the "Jobies" to a luncheon Saturday in the Continental Hotel; and, on Saturday afternoon, "Jobies" were given special half-price tickets to either "The Greatest Story Ever Told" or "My Fair Lady."

The girls were entertained at a formal banquet Saturday evening; however, the highlight of the whole weekend came for the Sikeston girls on Saturday night when their own guardian, Mrs. Edith Grimes was installed as Grand Second Messenger. This is indeed an honor for Mrs. Grimes, and the Sikeston Job's Daughters are proud to know that she will be serving as a member of Missouri's Grand Council for the next twelve months.

Besides meeting many other "Jobies," and having a wonderful time, the Sikeston girls came back with many new ideas to be used to better their own Bethel.

Sikeston should be proud that their Job's Daughters are taking an active part in state wide and international activities.

St. Johns Bay Rum
made from the original Virgin Island formula

St. Johns Bay Rum is carefully distilled and blended from the oil in the leaves of bay trees — not a product of modern chemistry. Such trees are found in abundance in the Virgin Islands. Its spicy — though subtle — aroma is thoroughly masculine. After shave or bath it tingles the skin, then soothes it to a blissful refreshment. Packaged in a hand-woven palm frond jacket and available at fine shops. Eight ounces, three dollars; sixteen ounces, four dollars and fifty cents — plus tax.

Potlatch Forest Rips Bertrand 10-7

Potlatch had to work, but came out with a close victory over a hard fighting bunch of Bertrand Connie Mackers, 10-7.

Potlatch came to bat in the bottom of the sixth inning with the score knotted at 4 all. In that inning, Sikeston blasted out 5 hits and scored 6 runs, with the help of three base on balls, to lead the Bertrand squad 10 to 4. Bertrand scored 3 runs in the top of the seventh to make the final score 10 to 7.

Potlatch whacked out 8 hits in the contest. McClain and Sherry had two hits a piece to lead the Forester attack. One of Sherry's hits was a second inning double. James, Heath, Owens and Scudder all had one hit each to round out the Sikeston barrage.

Bertrand had 5 hits in the contest. Morrow was the leading hitter for Bertrand, as he rapped a double and a single. Brunderman hit a second inning double for the losers. McConchie also blasted out a double. His blow came in the sixth inning. Richardson had the other hit for Bertrand, it being a single.

Brooks was the losing pitcher for Bertrand. He pitched six and 1/3 innings. He was relieved in the sixth with one man out and three men on by right fielder Sexton.

Stallings picked up the win for the Foresters. He was relieved by Spears in the sixth inning.

Gagliano And Boyer Fined By Cards

Baseball, 1965, likely will go into the books as a Fine Year.

The Boston and Philadelphia stay-ups and the St. Louis sleepy-heads are the latest to be added to a list of fined players that already included the whistling New York Yankees and the basketball-playing New York Mets.

The latest developments—all revealed within the last three weeks -- came Thursday when about a half-dozen Red Sox players were fined for missing an early-morning bedcheck and it was reported that several members of the Phillies had been hit in the pocketbook for similar curfew violations.

Also joining the club that is fast losing its exclusivity were Ken Boyer, the Most Valuable Player in the National League last season, and Cardinal teammate Phil Gagliano — both fined by freshman Manager Red Schoendienst for not being alert.

In both the Boston and Philadelphia cases the players involved were not named. However, it was indicated that the levies against the Red Sox stayouts would run about $100 each while the reported after hours activities of the Phillie players would cost them about three days pay each, under Gene Mauch's penalty schedule.

Mauch has employed the three-days-pay system for breaking curfews at various times during his six-year tenure with the Phillies. For a player making in the neighborhood of $10,000 for the six-month baseball season, that would be about $133 per man.

The Yankees started the fining binge on June 8 when they revealed that three unidentified players had been fined $250 each for breaking training. That included drinking and whistling at waitresses.

Then came the revelation of the Mets' fines, with pitchers Al Jackson and Larry Bearnarth and first baseman Ed Kranepool socked $250 each for playing basketball during the winter.

Round 2 ended late Thursday when Schoendienst, whose defending world champion Cardinals are languishing in seventh place, said he had fined Boyer and Gagliano "not much — just to keep them alert."

Both penalties were imposed for mistakes at Milwaukee. Boyer for straying off second base when he lost count of the number of strikes on a batter, and Gagliano for stopping at second base on a hit-run single.

Sports Talk By DON SAVAGE

This season we will find many men from this area going to the Mississippi River or the Mingo area to duck hunt.

As I look over the duck situation, I find that though the duck hunters in southeast Missouri are adaptable and adequate hunters they are at an extreme disadvantage. Now, I am sure that all duck hunters know what I am talking about, but I'll explain to you other sportsmen who might like to go to bat for another sportsman who just happens to be getting a raw deal.

The present duck season for the state of Missouri ranges from about the last week in October until the first week in December. This season is very satisfactory to the hunters in the northern part of Missouri, but it handicaps the bootheel hunter. As you know, ducks fly south when the weather turns cold. This puts our hunters at an extreme disadvantage, since they can go hunting in their shirt sleeves for most of the existing season.

In 1953 the Sikeston Junior Chamber of Commerce set out to undo this wrong which is set upon us by our own Conservation Commission. When they contacted the Missouri Conservation Commission, all they seem to have gotten was the "run around." Finally in desperation, a three man committee of Bill Vandivort, Doug Crutcher and Joe Fabick went to Washington in an attempt to remedy the situation. After much footwork and a lot of talking they finally found out that there was only one way it could be changed and that was through our own Conservation Commission.

Finally with the help of Mr. Ben Cash of Kennett, who was a representative on the Conservation Commission, the men received a 20 day additional hunting season for the bootheel. Now some 12 years later, we find that things are right back where they started and we now have had our 20 days taken back.

Really, we don't have to much to say in the matter because we have no one from this area on the Conservation Commission Board. However, we do have a proposal. There are several states who have a split season because of the difference in climate throughout the state. (California has a split season.) There is a southern zone for bass fishing in the state of Missouri. All streams and rivers south of the Diversion Channel at Cape Girardeau are on a different season than the rest of the state.

What we suggest is why couldn't that same thing be applied to our duck hunters. It would be much better for us if we were on the same season as Kentucky, Arkansas and Tennessee. We don't want to take the season from our friends to the north. We would just like to get in a little duck hunting ourselves. A split season is the obvious answer that would satisfy all parties involved.

St. Louis Whallops Redlegs 11 to 4, Gagliano Stars

The St. Louis Cardinals looked around after Thursday night's game and wondered, "what's everyone been worrying about."

They had just clobbered the Cincinnati Reds, 11-4, in Cincinnati and obviously did not look like the team that had lost 21 of its last 28 games.

Every thing went right and the Cardinals looked again like World Champions, not a seventh place club, 12 games out of first place.

Kansas City also did not look like a last place team as the A's belted the Yankees, 6-2, as Roland Sheldon whipped his former mates in New York. A three-run homer by Ken Harrelson in the first inning off Mel Settlemyre was the decisive blow.

Bill White and Phil Gagliano, inserted into the third spot in the batting order, did most of the damage for the Cardinals.

White doubled in the second inning off loser Jim O'Toole, setting up Bob Uecker's two-run single. The Cardinal first baseman doubled home Gagliano in the third and got his third hit, a single in the fifth.

Gagliano hit a three-run homer off reliever Roger Craig to cap a four-run fourth inning. Lou Brock later singled home two runs as the Cardinals slammed 12 hits.

Tracy Stallard gained his fourth victory in six decisions by holding the Reds to six hits--two of them solo homers by Vada Pinson and John Edwards --and four runs in 7 2-3 innings. For a change, the Cardinals got good relief as Don Dennis pitched hitless ball the last 1 1-3 innings.

After Harrelson's homer, the Yankees never caught up. Joe Pepitone hit a solo homer off Sheldon as the Yankees closed within 3-2, but the A's jumped on reliever Pedro Ramos in the eighth for three more runs set up when the Yankee outfield played a fly ball into a double.

The Cardinals return home tonight against the Chicago Cubs. Bob Purkey 5-4 will face Bob Buhl 7-6.

The A's travel to Cleveland where Jim Hunter 0-0 of the A's will meet Sam McDowell 8-3 in a night game.

Lewis And Legions Take Victories In Little League

Lewis smashed Lions in the first game last night of the doubleheader 13 to 1 at Puckett Field. Lions managed the same number of hits that Lewis did, but could not stay on base to score.

Lewis came out of the blocks scoring four runs in the first to take the lead and not let Lions score until the third, and then, only one run. In the second, Lewis pumped two runs across on only one hit, and in the third they were scoreless on one hit. When the fourth frame came into action Lewis exploded with four runs and two hits. After Lewis broke the string in the fifth with three runs, the game was called because of the Little League rule. Lions and Lewis each scored in every frame.

Corrigan, with no relief throughout the game, was credited with the win holding Lions to only one run and six hits. Hailey, took the loss for the Lions, giving up 13 runs on six hits.

Morgan and Culbertson led the hitting attack for the losers as they, together, pounded five of the six hits. Schatzley and Vines each had two hits — one a home run by Vines.

Legion took the nightcap as they slipped past their opponents, Jaycee's, with a score of four to three.

Howard led Legion to their winning attack as he gave up only three hits and three runs, and gave the loss to the Jaycee's pitcher, Craig, who also pitched a fine ballgame; however, gave up the same number of hits and only one run more.

In the first inning of the game Legion broke loose scoring four runs — their only four. Jaycee's managed one run in the first to start the score out 4 to 1. Craig held Legion to no more runs throughout the entire ballgame and only one more hit. Legion scored another run in the fourth and one in the sixth to total the runs to three — not enough to take the win over Legion.

Puckett smashed two singles to lead the hitting for Legion. Britt pounded the other in the first inning.

Joness, Craig, and Colley each had hits — Joness' being a home run.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: As the father of three children I thought I knew a lot about life, but I still learn something every day. Last night I took the family to a drive-in movie and I learned plenty.

The feature hadn't been on five minutes when a young girl in the next car squealed, "Stop that." About 10 seconds later she yelled, "If you don't leave me alone I'm going to sock you." Then a boy's voice said, "Oh c'mon, don't be so touchy." I looked in their direction and saw an attractive young girl who couldn't have been more than 15 years old. Her boy friend appeared to be about 17.

At that moment another female voice in another car warned, "If you don't cut that out I'm going to get out and walk home." The boy seated next to her answered angrily, "You don't think I brought you here to look at this crummy movie, do you?"

At that point my wife whispered, "Let's go home. There's no telling what will be said next and I don't want to have to explain to the children."

Please, Ann Landers, come right out and tell teen-age girls the facts of life so they will know how to deal with boys who are out to get all they can.--A FATHER

Dear Dad: You must be a new reader. I've been telling them for ten years. And my recent boo, "Teen-agers and Sex" has offered another round of ammunition. A girl in Little Rock wrote, "Your book came in very handy. I took it along on a date last Friday. When my boy friend got fresh, I hit him with it."

Dear Ann Landers: In view of the recent letter concerning a daughter who refused to finance her younger sister's college education I'd like to recite my experience.

I put two relatives through college. They both promised to pay me back out of their first earnings. My niece wanted so desperately to be a teacher that she offered to pay me 10% interest on the loan. I refused the interest and told her I'd settle for the principle.

Two years have passed since she got her degree and my niece now has an excellent job in a fine school. She has not mentioned one word about repaying the money she owes me. Last Christmas I received no card from her.

The other relative has a fine position in the electronics field. I have not heard from him since his graduation last year. When I saw him at a family affair recently he gave me a nervous hello and avoided me for the balance of the evening.

Can self-respecting people put obligations out of their minds and pretend they don't exist? Are all people who borrow money like this or did I draw a couple of lemons?--TAKEN

Dear Taken: All people are NOT like that. Some people mean it when they say they will repay a loan.

Rather than just hand over money to a friend or relative I recommend this: Offer to be a co-signer at the bank. The borrower will then owe the bank, not you. If he fails to meet the payments he will receive crisp and impersonal reminders.

Of course if he goes sour at the bank, as the co-signer you must pay the loan. However, your chances for getting stuck are slight since most people will stick a friend or a relative before they will go sour at a bank.

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SHAPE OF THE CROSS
That we be forgiven,
Let us each forgive.
Now in peace together
Let us try to live
May the heavy stone be
Rolled far away
May His spirit abide
With us this day.
When the sun rises
On next Easter morn,
May true faith anew
In hearts be born.

What's New With Maadam Nhu

Editor's Note -- Two years ago the delicate if sharp -- tongued First Lady of Viet Nam was on the world's center stage. What has become of Madame Nhu? She is in self-imposed exile in Rome, but some say she still has visions of a triumphant return to the land of her late husband.

"Madame Nhu?" said a farmer who lives nearby. "I've never heard the name before, but I've been told there is somebody from Viet Nam around here."

Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu, the once-powerful First Lady of Viet Nam, lives in seclusion in the unpretentious villa. Two years ago she toured the United States talking to as many audiences as she could gather for as long as they would listen. Now she sees no one. The few Italians who have met her say she believes she will return to Saigon one day, the policies of her husband and brother-in-law vindicated.

Mme. Nhu was in the United States during the coup that brought violent death to her husband, Ngo Dinh Nhu, the head of Viet Nam's secret police, and to her brother-in-law, President Ngo Dinh Diem.

It was her contention then that whatever faults the government had-though she would admit to precious few-it was better than any alternative before the Vietnamese people.

She left the United States and moved to Paris, and occasionally she visited Rome. Later she moved to the relatively modest villa where she now lives.

The community is a pastoral area of green farms about 15 miles southwest of Rome, not far from the seaside resort of Ostia Beach.

Apparently Mme. Nhu does not lack money. A villager who occasionally has worked inside her villa says she has a household staff of two maids, a cook, a part-time gardener, a secretary and a French nurse-tutor for her two younger children.

These two-Quynh, 13, a boy, and Le Quyen, 6, a girl-live in the villa and seldom leave it. Mme. Nhu's older children-Le Thuy, 20, a daughter, and Trace, 17, a son-are staying in Paris, according to the Italian national police.

Mme. Nhu herself is reported to spend almost all her time in her study in the villa, working on her memoirs and occasional statements that she mails to newspapers.

Mme. Nhu apparently avoids official contacts. Sources at the South Vietnamese Embassy in Rome say they have never seen her.

Grocers in the area say they have not received a single order from the villa.

"They seem to buy everything in Rome or some place else," said a baker. "We do not even see her at church. The local priest told us she is Roman Catholic, but we never see her at Sunday Mass."

Allen Wade Haugsted

Baker Joins FBI List

WASHINGTON -- Allen Wade Haugsted, a hot-tempered Minnesota baker, charged with a deadly family crime rampage, has been added to the FBI's list of Ten Most Wanted Fugitives.

On the night of Feb. 19, Haugsted allegedly invaded his mother-in-law's home near Willmar, Minn., shot his estranged wife in the chest and head, killing her, and killed his mother-in-law with three more gunshots, in addition to severely clubbing her on the head. Haugsted also allegedly shot his seven-year-old daughter in the head, seriously wounding her, and inflicted a superficial gunshot wound on his brother-in-law. This violence occurred three days after divorce papers were served on Haugsted and two days after he allegedly purchased a .22 caliber automatic pistol at a Willmar store.

Upon indications that Haugsted had fled interstate, a federal warrant was issued at Minneapolis, March 3, charging him with unlawful interstate flight to avoid prosecution for murder.

Haugsted has also worked as a cook, handyman, janitor and motion picture projectionist. He has a lengthy juvenile arrest record for thefts and, in 1950, after conviction for grand larceny, he was sent to the Minnesota state reformatory for a 17-month term.

Born at Minneapolis, Jan. 13, 1931, he is 5' 10" tall, weighs 200 pounds, has a heavy build, medium complexion, brown hair and blue eyes. He has a small scar at the back of his head above the neckline, reportedly wears dentures and walks at a quick, nervous pace with his toes pointed outwards.

Haugsted is known as an avid outdoorsman and camper and a skilled cabinet maker. He is said to enjoy television and radio newscasts, as well as movies and TV detective and cowboy programs. He also reportedly likes to read detective stories and explore abandoned mines. Known as a meticulous and neat dresser, he reportedly prefers sport clothes. Said to be normally a reserved loner, with no close friends, Haugsted has a reputation for being accident prone and quick to submit an injury claim.

He has reportedly smoked cigarettes heavily in the past, is said to occasionally drink beer and to be particularly fond of fruit juices and ice cream, especially malted milks.

He is considered to be extremely dangerous.

Persons receiving any information concerning the whereabouts of Haugsted are requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be located on the first page of local telephone directories.

FINDING THE WAY

'Happy Fourth of July'

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

No one has ever wished me a "Happy Fourth of July." There would be sense in the greeting for this is the birthday of a nation which insists that the pursuit of happiness is an inalienable right of the human being.

The trilogy of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" is heresy in a totalitarian state.

What is the version of happiness America offers to mankind on this anniversary of its founding?

The pursuit of happiness is dependent upon the pursuit of righteousness. In the end, happiness is a profoundly moral problem. The happy persons on July 4th are not those who are doing just what comes naturally. Happiness is not just tickling the fancy. Happiness is the by-product of vocation.

The happiest people are those who have strengthened their country because they have acted in response to their fundamental faith in God's love and concern.

They live in a country which protects this freedom to respond. Thus, it is no slip of the tongue to assert that the inalienable rights of man are life, liberty and the pursuit of righteousness.

There's always the difference between seeking after righteousness and preening ourselves with self-righteousness. We Americans have been humiliated and are not feeling very self-righteous. We live in a world which questions us about our vaunted freedoms and asks us whether we really mean what we say we mean.

Yet America's strength is in recognition that while we have many tough and unsolved problems, we also believe that they can be solved. We act in the arena of responsible freedom.

There is an old story about a boy who was flying a kite beyond his line of vision. He was asked how he knew that there was a kite on the string. "Oh", said the boy, "I can tell by the pull of it."

Pursuing righteousness is believing that there is a moral law, and even when the possibilities are outside of one's vision, still feeling the pull of it. This is the quality of character which protects and preserves freedom.

It is this goodness which is the rootage for the tree called happiness. On this important national holiday we pledge our faith that man has these inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of righteousness. Therein is his happiness.

Let me wish you "A Happy Fourth of July."

Movies Lure Dollars

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK — While Washington frets about American tourists spending Yankee dollars abroad, one industry confidently predicts it will be pulling back more of these dollars this year than ever.

The motion picture industry says it gets 55 per cent of its gross income from showing its flickers abroad. And it claims this is a higher percentage than can be boasted by any other large American industry.

This year it expects to bring back $10 million more than last year's $260 million.

Movie makers also insist that they inspire demand throughout the world for American products and thus help boost U.S. exports of goods. This is the nation's biggest source of dollars when it tries to balance its international monetary payments. And Washington is beating the bushes to get American businessmen to try to sell more abroad.

The American products that movies popularize run all the way from blue jeans in Algiers to electric guitars in Stockholm, from gocarts in Bern, Switzerland, to home furnishings in Caracas, Venezuela.

Movie makers also take credit for stimulating interest of foreigners in visiting the United States. They can't prove it, but they feel sure that pictures of American scenes and particularly of American ways of life make Europeans curious to see for themselves.

With an eye on gleaning still more dollars abroad, the Motion Picture Export Association of America is urging the government to get its foreign service to put more emphasis on stimulating such trade. It says its return flow of dollars would be increased if Washington could get some nations with blocked funds to ease their restrictions, and others to lower discriminatory trade barriers.

Such barriers also work against the buying of American goods that foreigners see and admire in movies. A survey of U.S. consular posts shows that this is the case in such places as Pakistan, Egypt, Brazil, Israel and the countries behind the Iron Curtain.

But in many lands American movies have inspired consumer demands that local manufacturers have been inspired to satisfy. Consulates note this affect in Baghdad and Buenos Aires, in Madrid and Cairo.

Sweden reports its younger set goes heavily for pop records, sportswear, cosmetics and auto decorations such as are featured in the American flickers. The older set is influenced by appliances and home interiors.

Pursuit Of Excellence Marked Selnick Career

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD — The pursuit of excellence marked the film-making career of David O. Selznick, and "Gone With The Wind" remains as monumental evidence of how well he achieved his purpose.

Though first released a quarter-century ago when theater admissions were half what they are today, "Gone With The Wind" is still the top money-making film of all time. Its evergreen quality is such that MGM can re-release it every three years and collect another $5 million in rentals.

Most of the great Selznick films had the same timeless quality. Each was hand-fashioned by months of meticulous planning, mountains of memos and dogged attention to every aspect of filming.

The result was a panorama of screen achievements. His films at RKO helped put the studio in the bigtime: "A Bill of Divorcement," which introduced Katharine Hepburn; "King Kong," still the best of the science fiction thrillers; "Of Human Bondage," which established Bette Davis as a dramatic star.

Moving to MGM, he put his personal stamp on such films as "David Copperfield," "A Tale of Two Cities," "Dinner at Eight," "Anna Karenina" and "Viva Villa."

Selznick wearied of the big-studio operation. "It is impossible for 40 or 50 productions to go through one man's hands and emerge with any degree of quality," he reasoned. And so he began the independent course that continued until his death this week of a heart attack.

His success as an independent was dazzling. He produced the best film ever made about Hollywood, "A Star Is Born"; a great wacky comedy with Carole Lombard and Fredric March, "Nothing Sacred"; a fine swashbuckling romance with Ronald Colman, "The Prisoner of Zenda." All were subsequently remade by other producers with scant success.

And then, "Gone With The Wind."

6. City Bond Issue

Chamber of Commerce Board Endorses Proposal

Editor's Note: This is the sixth of a series of articles prepared by the board of public works to explain its plan to improve the city's water and sewage system. Voters will be asked to approve the proposal in a bond election.

Whereas, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce has carefully studied the plan for improving the city's water and sewer systems; and

Whereas, these improvements are necessary to meet the needs of a growing community; and

Whereas, these improvements will give the citizens of Sikeston better service, more effective fire protection, and decreased pollution; and

Whereas, these improvements will help to stabilize the cost of fire insurance; and

Whereas, these improvements are vitally important for continued commercial and residential growth and progress; and

Whereas, these improvements will help attract new industry to Sikeston:

Therefore, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors does hereby endorse and sponsor these proposed improvements and urges all citizens to vote on July -, 1965, in favor of the bond issue which will make them possible.

One result of the $1,200,000 plan to improve Sikeston's water and sewer systems --if this plan is approved by the voters -- will be the stabilization of fire insurance costs.

According to the city insurance committee, which advises the city on such matters, unless the water storage and distribution systems are expanded in capacity, there is a possibility that Sikeston might lose its status as a class-eight city and, for fire insurance purposes, be re-classified as class-nine. This would have the effect of raising fire insurance rates.

The city insurance committee reports that there is no immediate rate increase in sight, but that the possibility becomes more likely as community growth further strains the city's water system.

The Missouri Inspection Bureau, which makes fire insurance classifications, has pointed out in a letter to the board of public works that the distribution and storage facilities of the municipal water works are rapidly becoming inadequate and are in need of improvement.

Sikeston's continuing growth in population creates increased commercial, industrial, and residential water demands, which reduce the fire control effectiveness of the municipal water system. As the effectiveness of fire control decreases, fire insurance rates tend to increase.

The plan to improve the city's water and sewer system will expand the capacity of the city's water storage and water distribution facilities, and will give Sikeston better fire protection.

This improved fire protection, in turn, will reduce the chance of any increase in the cost of fire insurance to the citizens of Sikeston.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why is March 17 celebrated as Saint Patrick's Day?

A—March 17 is the traditional day on which Saint Patrick died. It is his feast day, not his birthday. To the early Christians the day of death represented the beginning of eternal peace and glory.

"Fautasi" Boats

Western Samoans call their huge longboats "fautasi". These superb sailors evolved their racing craft from whale boats and skim them across the water propelled by 40 or more oarsmen, while the coxswain beats out the tempo on a tin can.

You need not walk alone

When was the last time you woke up in the morning and said to yourself "It's a great day to be alive"?
When was the last time you tossed a cheery "good morning" to your bus driver . . . or smiled at a stranger on the street?

High in the Middle

Wright Touch Intact At Taliesen

Today the Taliesin Fellowship is filled with new students. Taliesin associated architects are working on some 50 projects totaling more than $32 million.

And the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation, which includes two schools, Taliesin West near Scottsdale, Ariz., and Taliesin East at Spring Green, Wis., is in the black after a brush with bankruptcy from an $800,000 back-taxes bite.

The atmosphere of Taliesin has changed only subtlely since his death. There's a bookkeeper and lawyer now—Wright stubbornly ignored the existence of money. The canvas roofs have been replaced with wood; a new theater has been built from one of Wright's sketches.

Students, who come from all over the world to study, work amidst drawings and sketches of "the master," learn engineering, philosophy and concept directly from Wright himself—most of his lectures and Sunday-morning conversations with famous guests were recorded. They still share communal chores of housekeeping, cooking and serving meals, building and gardening.

Guiding this effort is Wright's widow, Olgivanna, soft-voiced artist author, composer who became his third wife in 1926 and helped him found the fellowship in 1932.

She presides with an air of fragile grace over drawing-room conversations with the ever-present guests.

Her face, framed by thin silver braids against jet hair, is intently reposed as she listens to musicals, or watches pageants or dances staged by the students and their wives, which she and her daughter, Iovanna, have written, composed, choreographed, directed and costumed.

The only hint of steel and authority is in her black eyes and her regal expectance of perfection in every detail around her.

Yet every sketch or plan that leaves Taliesin is passed by her; she dictates color schemes, chooses interior and exterior materials of the smallest home or biggest building.

She is intricately involved with the corps of some 35 Taliesin-trained architects, many of whom have been with the fellowship for a quarter of a century, working now under the direction of Wright's son-in-law, William Wesley Peters.

She does all this, she said in an interview here, through the "eyes," he gave her.

"Mr. Wright left us debts; but he left us the means to pay them. He left us a heritage of beauty. Our eyes were hardly ever separated through our 32 years together. We traveled, worked, lived always together. I was his critic, and often a suggestion would light a spark.

"He left me a pretty good measuring stick. 'Mother,' he would say to me, 'beauty is the highest expression of morality. Never compromise on beauty.'"

Born in Montenegro, educated in Russia, her "university" was a Paris cafe kitchen. As she washed dishes she learned 50 English words a day, pinned up on the wall before her. During the early years of Taliesin she scrubbed floors.

Taliesin, a Welsh word meaning "shining brow," began with the Wrights and a small group of students who lived in tents and cooked outside on the desert.

It continues today, six years after his death, much more comfortably both physically and financially, with the same spirit with which it began.

Johnson Grass Sprayed In Sikeston Areas

By Councilman Harry E. Dudley

Recently the Scott County weed control truck manned by E. J. Cook and Jim Davis has been in our city. These County employees were spraying Johnson Grass trying to control it on City streets, alleys and road ditches. They cannot spray Johnson Grass on private property, and it is almost impossible to control this pest unless the owners of infested lots take action of their own to control it. It is very probable that some patches of the grass were missed by the spray crew, and if you see any in the streets, alleys or ditches please call GR 1-2173 giving us the location and on the next trip down here they will try to spray these areas.

In driving around Sikeston, we were impressed with her beautiful residential homes, well-kept lawns, and brilliant blooming shrubs and trees. Strong and deep rooted in all of us is pride of possession. It is as old as the evening star, the home is our first point of interest, our dearest possession and our hometown should be a close "second." We are all proud of Sikeston, and its steady growth within a period of years. The business sections, our churches, newspapers, radio station, schools, and library, her parks, Little League parks, Babe Ruth, Connie Mack Leagues and places of entertainment are a vital part of Sikeston.

Each of us has a job to do in our hometown. If it's worth living in, it is worth boosting and supporting. It takes loyalty, cooperation, and unselfish interest to make a community like Sikeston thrive and grow. A spirit of pride and cooperation should make us eager to work wholeheartedly, hand in hand, in support of such business and social citizenship as is evidenced in Sikeston.

Sikeston is a beautiful city. If you don't believe it, just take time out from your busy schedule and drive around and see for yourself.

City Manager Miller informs us that it will be possible for city crews to again remove diseased, dying and dead trees and stumps where readily accessible from yards and streets. This work will be done in the fall or during inelement weather, so please make your requests known by writing or calling the City Administrative Building, phone GR 1-2173 as this will be a first come first service project. Also, requests for sidewalk construction and reconstruction are being received.

WHICH TAKES PRECEDENCE?
I wouldn't meet'em
If I had my "ruther."
With a paper cup in one hand
And a steering wheel in their other.
---Tommye Satterfield

A real estate salesman spent all day Sunday showing a couple through model homes. "And here," he wearily said at the tenth home he had shown, "is the hobby room. Do any of you folks have hobbies?"

"Yes," replied the woman, "Looking through model homes on Sundays."

Latest Beats On Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A most unusual, experimental program aimed at a minority audience will occupy 90 minutes of CBS' expensive prime time Monday night.

From 9:30 to 11 p.m. (EDT) viewers will be regaled with the latest in beat music by more than 20 top singing acts beloved by the younger crowd. In between numbers there will be non-commercial commercials—in a language which older viewers may find difficult to understand.

The show is "It's What's Happening, Baby!" a public service "swingin' soiree" on behalf of the federal Office of Economic Opportunity. The special audience is youngsters between 16 and 21 who are thinking about quitting — or already have quit — high school before graduating.

Host and message-giver is a disc jockey named Murray Kaufman, 38, but always called "Murray the K" by his young fans. Murray is peculiarly qualified, for he was himself a high school drop-out, has an enormous youthful following, and speaks (and invented) a lot of the slangy hip talk that is almost a secret language of the kids.

"The OEO looked around and found that I was able to reach them," Murray explained during a rehearsal break. "When they first came to me with an idea, I thought they were trying to intellectualize the problem and said that I could perhaps present the idea another way. The special is my idea.

"As a drop-out myself, I've been there and I know what those kids on the streets of New York or in the hills of West Virginia or any place are thinking about. I couldn't care less about the nice little girls from Scarsdale or Shaker Heights — it's boys mostly. And the rapport will be mostly that it's what's happening."

Murray, CBS and the musical performers (who range from Herman's Hermits to the Cannibal and the Headhunters) are contributing their services.

And now, if you'll excuse me for four weeks, I'll dig some weeds and divots before resuming the column from Hollywood late in July.

AND I'M REAL FRIENDLY
I've heard it said that money talks,
And now I wonder why
It has never learned to speak to me,
Except to say goodby.
---J. Pat Babin

Keeping Down Clutter

Polly

DEAR POLLY—Each time my child receives a new toy she must part with an old one which she can choose. This keeps the clutter down and teaches her she must give to receive.—LINDA

DEAR POLLY—I have found a good use for all the plastic coffee can lids I have saved. I will make a fence from them for my flower bed. Stand them around the bed with half the round top under the ground and half sticking up above the ground. If you prefer, the part above the ground can be painted green or some other color.—SYLVIA

DEAR POLLY—When painting from the paint can or even pouring paint into a roller tray, I tear a piece of cleansing tissue in half, twist it and tuck it around the lip of the can. This absorbs the paint that ordinarily runs into the lip around the top of the can. When the painting is finished just pull the tissue out and there is not a lot of residue to clean up. The top fits tightly again and a lot of time and "clean up" has been saved. A full tissue is too heavy to tuck in properly but one half of one will fit almost around the entire top of a quart can.

Many of us like to stand platters and so on against the backs of cupboard shelves but have no plate grooves in which to place them. I take a pipe cleaner, twist each end into a small loop that a thumb-tack will hold firmly to the shelf and place it so the strip is in the desired place on a shelf to keep the dish from slipping down. This has the additional advantage of being easy to remove at house cleaning time, can be placed on top of shelf paper at the proper distance from the wall to hold a particular piece and saves shelf space as well as broken dishes.—MRS. G. B.

DEAR POLLY — Knowing that my boys' shirts with long sleeves and long inside tails will probably be too small next winter, I am converting them into new style summer shirts. Simply cut off the sleeves to come above the elbows, allowing for 1½-inch hems. Snip off the tail allowing for a 2¼-inch hem that is to be turned up to give the appearance of a 2-inch band at the bottom. Add a buttonhole and button in the center front of the band. Next pleat over on the side seams to take up the excess width and sew down with two matching buttons for each side of this band. For the cost of 15 minutes, a bit of thread and five buttons I have the latest style shirt from what would likely be a discarded one next fall.—SHARLENE

GIRLS—I am so sorry but it is impossible for us to answer the many requests for "repeats" of previous hints. Do try to clip and save any that interest you.—POLLY

FRENCH ACCENT—A touch of Paris is being added to New York's warm weather scene with the increasing popularity of sidewalk cafes. Here, French actress Yvonne Constant catches up on her home town news while relaxing at a Fifth Avenue open-air cafe.

In the interest of all the countries of this hemisphere, including of course Canada, a common market is long overdue and should be negotiated now.

Within this framework, Latin America might at last achieve its dream of stable prices for its raw materials and industrial development; Canada might achieve its hope for greater population; and the United States as the hub would certainly achieve what is vitally important to it -- a financially healthy, cooperative hemisphere capable of standing on its own feet.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. (I John 4:9)

PRAYER: Thou art loving indeed, Lord. Grant me Thy love, its warmth and self-renewing power and force to love others and to live the best for Thee, as I do my work every day. In the name of the Master, who taught His disciples to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. . . . . .Amen."

The world is full of willing people; some willing to work, the rest willing to let them. ---Brice Van Horn Fillmore

Seek Man For Child Kidnapping

WASHINGTON -- Alson Thomas Wahrlich, reportedly armed with a pistol and a surgical scalpel and charged with kidnaping a six-year-old Arizona girl, has been added to the FBI's list of Ten Most Wanted Fugitives.

He allegedly abducted the young child in Tucson, Ariz., April 16, 1964, brutally beat and choked her and sexually molested her before abandoning her in the same city. When investigation reflected that Wahrlich had fled Arizona, FBI assistance to locate him was requested. A federal warrant was issued at Tucson, April 28, 1964, charging him with unlawful interstate flight to avoid prosecution for kidnaping.

Wahrlich, who reportedly has mental blackouts, has been previously imprisoned following conviction for aggravated assault, child molesting and a crime against nature. A prison psychologist has described him as a schizophrenic paranoid and sexual deviate with a history of antisocial behavior. A close relative considers him destructive, untruthful and cruel.

In 1957, he was convicted in Arizona of molesting, beating and choking a five-year-old girl in his ice cream vending truck parked in the desert. He was given sentences of up to five years which he served in the Maricopa County, Ariz., jail, and the Arizona State Penitentiary at Florence.

He served a sentence of three years in the Oklahoma State Penitentiary, at McAlester, upon conviction for committing a crime against nature and was released in October, 1963.

He served in the army between February, 1953, and March, 1956, and has reportedly secured a certificate as a student pilot.

Wahrlich was born in Rensselaer County, N.Y., Feb. 4, 1936. He is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 135 to 140 pounds, wears glasses, has blue eyes, brown hair, a medium build and a medium complexion. He has a scar on his left shoulder, a vaccination scar on his left arm, a scar on each side of his abdomen and a tatto of a heart and the name "Cindy" on his left arm. He was married in 1957 and divorced in 1962.

Wahrlich has worked as a truck driver, ranch worker, dishwasher, house trailer repairman, hospital orderly, insurance salesman and ice cream truck vendor. He is said to occasionally drink beer, is interested in guns and strongly prefers traveling by personally owned car.

In addition to a pistol, which he reportedly constantly carries, Wahrlich is said to carry a surgical scalpel in his trouser's pocket. He is considered to be armed and exremely dangerous.

Any person receiving any information concerning the whereabouts of Wahrlich, is requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be located on the first page of local telephone directories.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK., —Second Lieutenant Robert E. England, Headquarters Squadron 97th Combat Support Group, and Staff Sergeant Walter D. Riner, 97th Combat Defense Squadron, have been selected as the Outstanding Officer and Noncommissioned Officer for the 97th Bomb Wing, for the month of May.

Lieutenant England is chief of the quality control branch, for the director of personnel.

His citation states that he has established an outstanding rapport with all squadron commanders, first sergeants and supervisors and has established an outstanding career motivation program.

Through his efforts, the highest retention rates ever at Blytheville have been achieved. The base placed second in Second Air Force for the 10th cycle retention program.

Sergeant Riner is assigned as a communication plotter, element leader and, when needed, as a flight commander for the Combat Defense Sq.

According to his citation, Sergeant Riner's professionalism has received for him on numerous occasions, outstanding comments from inspectors and other officials from higher headquarters.

The citation further states that these qualifications have earned for him the highest respect of both supervisors and subordinates.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK., --The U. S. Air Force Academy, in conjunction with Headquarters Strategic Air Command, has chosen Blytheville AFB to host "Operation Third Lieutenant" for the third consecutive year.

The original concept of sending cadets into the field to observe, first hand, the workings of Air Force units was conceived in early 1957. The general thinking was that it is essential that cadets, prior to their graduation and commissioning, have the opportunity to see the Air Force at work and at leisure to establish a realistic level of expectation of what the Air Force career will be like.

While here, the cadets will perform specific duties for four weeks with their assigned units, and upon completion of this temporary duty, they'll return to the academy. The cadets will be here from June 28 through July 23.

Since its inception, "Operation Third Lieutenant" has been termed successful by all concerned, particularly the cadets who regard the experience as one of the highlights of their four years at the academy.

The cadets assigned to Blytheville AFB are members of the Class of 67. They are the new "second classmen" at the academy which is equivalent to being a junior in college. They will not be here on a tour or a rest, but to look, listen and learn.

Strike Breaks Up

PHILADELPHIA AP -- The five - day wildcat strike of Teamster drivers began breaking up today as chain store food trucks, driven by Local 107 members threatened with loss of their jobs, delivered tons of fresh fruit, vegetables, fish and meat.

In the first hours after dawn more than 100 trucks of Food Fair, Acme, A. & P. and Penn Fruit left warehouses for supply - exhausted stores in the Greater Philadelphia area.

The drivers of Local 107, which had called the unauthorized "holiday" Monday in definance of national Teamster leaders, reported for work after receiving warning telegrams from their chain store employers that they will be "considered to have quit" if they didn't come in this morning.

Dividend Checks Mailed Farmers

Farmers in Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard and Cape Girardeau counties are receiving checks totaling $21,-831.00., as dividends on their stock in the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston, Hal F. Robertson, manager, announced today.

This dividend was declared by directors payable to member-stockholders of record at the close of business May 31.

The payment of the dividend has the effect of reducing the average interest rate paid by association members on their loans. It was made possible by a dividend received on its stock in the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, passing on a portion of the savings made by the co-operative land bank system.

During the first five months of 1965, the association made Land Bank loans totaling $1,-814,626.

Dividend Checks Mailed Out

CHARLESTON -- The Mississippi County Savings and Loan Association Tuesday issued its semi-annual dividend for the six months ending June 30.

Total amount of the dividend is $51,147.87, according to Mrs. Glenn Hutson, office manager.

"We always get calls from people who don't receive their checks," Mrs. Hutson said. "Only $22,997.87 was mailed out in the form of checks. The remainder, $28,150 was credited to the accounts of those stockholders who have requested that we handle their dividends in that manner."

"But people do forget," she added.

Support Issue

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce have urged citizens to approve a bond issue for water and sewage system improvements.

Chamber manager Jim Musick made the announcement yesterday at a Chamber luncheon membership meeting. He read the resolution to the 32 members and guests present.

Henry C. Maddox, Jefferson City, director of Missouri's Commerce and Industrial Development department, outlined the broad acres an industry investigates before locating in a new site.

"There are more than 600 factors an industrialist considers in a town," he said, "and there are 15,000 organizations like this Chamber of Commerce (across the nation) dedicated to bringing new business to their community."

The speaker then reminded the group of a national study last year which showed that 150 new industries located last year. "That means," Maddox explained, if you are an average town, getting your average, and doing average, a new industry will locate in Sikeston once every 100 years."

To "beat the averages" the director said a community must have "something in it that will attract an industry." Something more than meeting the educational requirements, governmental functions, and normal growth rate is needed, he said.

"The community must have a spirit of progress. There must be a constant drive by the community's leaders to improve and to progress. The local leadership must sell the city and prepare the community for industrial development," Maddox said.

Top Hearnes Money Lid

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House tackled compromise appropriation bills today exceeding Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' general revenue budget of about $3.6 million.

Rep. Bernard (Doc) Simcoe, D - Callaway, House appropriations chairman, said the final figures would be less than $5 million over the governor's recommendations.

That would include $10 million in the final catchall bill to cover extra state aid for schools as suggested by the governor. The bill boosting the foundation program formula by that amount was passed by the House and sent to the governor's desk Thursday.

Originally the House wanted to allot $24.5 million extra for school aid but the governor said the state couldn't afford that.

The conference committee agreement made few major changes.

"There wasn't too much difference between the two houses," said Sen. J. F. Patterson, D - Caruthersville, Senate appropriations chairman. "There wasn't a lot of room to argue."

Without the $17 million odd in the final catchall bill, the major money bills as compromised carry $265,963,000 from general revenue, or $3,650,000 more than the governor recommended.

This does not include fees and federal funds which are expected to raise the total one-year budget to something around $875 million.

Alabama Police Join Search

CAPE GIRARDEAU — As Huntsville, Ala., police continued their search for two men and two women reportedly seen the day Elizabeth Ann Gill vanished, the total reward money offered has climbed to $1,695.

According to Police Chief Irvin E. Beard, the four were last seen in a late model Thunderbird and a Chevrolet pickup with Alabama license plates originally issued to other vehicles. Alabama law requires license plates to remain on the vehicle to which they were issued.

The two couples were reportedly selling purses door to door, and were not seen after Betsy disappeared June 13.

Cape Girardeau police have checked leads from Baltimore, Md., to Dallas, Tex., since the child vanished, but each has produced nothing.

Orders All Papers Close

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP-- Premier Nguyen Cao Ky threw a brick into a political hornet's nest when he ordered all 36 of Saigon's Vietnamese-language newspapers to close July 1.

For sheer political audacity, the new military premier's action Thursday was unequaled, even under President Ngo Dinh Dien's dictatorship.

Each newspaper is essentially the organ of a political faction or pressure group. Most publishers are also leading political figures.

The Roman Catholics, the Buddhists, the Cao Daists and the Hoa Haos also have their newspapers.

Since Diem's overthrow in 1963, the Saigon government has changed five times. Each time, the press has played a big role. The bulk of the newspapers opposed each government.

This was probably the major factor in Ky's decision to play rough. By closing all papers for one month, until they can be reorganized along lines satisfactory to the government, he avoids the risk of showing partiality to any faction.

Ky decreed that during July there would be two official newspapers -- one for the "rear" meaning Saigon and one for the "front" presumably meaning the rest of the nation.

Communists Warm Up Old Dispute

BERLIN AP -- The East German Communists threatened today to tie up barge and rail shipments to West Berlin. They also suggested that the four occupation powers give them control of air traffic to West Berlin.

The threat to barge and rail shipments was made by Transport Minister Edwin Kramer in a speech to the Communist party Central Committee published by Neues Deutschland, the party newspaper.

Kramer said permits for barge traffic between West Germany and West Berlin issued by the four occupation powers would not be acceptable after June 30.

He warned that East Germany would take necessary measures if the West German government does not reach agreement with the East German regime by then to establish new procedures.

Concerning rail traffic, the East Germans went to increase freight rates by about 20 per cent, contrary to four-power rules.

The threat of the air corridors came from East Germany's new foreign minister, Otto Winzer, who told the Central Committee the Berlin Air Safety Center which controls the air routes lost its basis of operation when the Allied Control Council for Berlin ceased to function in 1948.

After the council ceased to operate, the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union continued to operate the Air Safety Center.

The military operations along the superhighway subsided Thursday night. Western diplomats were puzzled about its meaning, but the West German government said the situation was serious and called for countermeasures.

Four Injured In Accidents

The highway patrol of troop E reported four persons were injured in two area automobile accidents yesterday.

In an accident on highway A, three miles east of Uniontown at 2:30 p.m., a 1956 Chevrolet driven by Harold Heise, 35, Uniontown, and a 1964 GMC truck, driven by Donald J. Manning, 30, Perryville sideswiped. The impact caused the truck to run off the road and hit a tree.

Injured were Heise and his son Ricky, four, the father received arm cuts, and the son head cuts. Manning received head cuts and an arm injury. All were taken to the Perry County Memorial hospital in Perryville.

In a single car accident on Route N, six miles north of Charleston, at 3:15 p.m., Renda Ward, 18, Poplar Bluff, suffered a mild concussion. She was a passenger in a 1964 Volkswagen, driven by Freda Wilkerson, 25, Charleston. She was taken to a Charleston clinic and released.

The accident occurred as the car was rounding a curve and met another car. The Volkswagen struck loose gravel, skidded and overturned.

Johnson Truman Confer

KANSAS CITY AP -- President Johnson marked the 20th birthday of the United Nations today by conferring here with Harry S. Truman, who was chief executive when the U.N. was born.

Johnson told reporters he and Truman "talked about our problems in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic." He said they also reminisced about some of Truman's historic acts as chief executive.

Truman, beaming, said that "in my historic memory" no president ever made a greater impact than Johnson during his first months in the White House.

From Missouri, Johnson was bound for San Francisco to address U.N. anniversary ceremonies.

The chief executive, rising early, visited the coffee shop of the Muehlebach Hotel, where he spent the night, about 6 a.m. He sat down for his morning coffee then embarked on a stroll.

Johnson personally greeted scores of shopkeepers and pedestrians during his stroll.

Today was the first meeting between Johnson and Truman since the President called on Truman at a Kansas City hospital last Oct. 21 while Truman was recovering from a fall.

Redistricting In Tangle

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- The problem of House redistricting is all tangled up again in the Missouri Legislature.

The Senate refused to accept a compromise version Thursday that would have allowed a 168-member House to reapportion itself every 10 years. That headed the issue for a new try at conference committee settlement.

Opponents defeated the first plan 12-21. They advocated a system, recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, of setting up a bipartisan commission to do the redistricting job. That is the way the Senate is being revamped now.

Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, said he understood the Senate Redistricting Commission will not submit its report until the people act on the proposed constitutional amendment setting up a 168-member House --five more members than at present.

Waters said he had heard a special election on the constitutional amendment would be held in August or as soon as the legal requirements can be met.

The basic difference is that House wants to redistrict itself and the Senate opponents of the plan say a bipartisan commission could do a fairer job with less gerrymandering.

Congress Wins Praise

"This 89th Congress will leap into history as the most effective and the most rewarding Congress in the history of our nation," Johnson told 2,500 Democrats crowded into a hotel ballroom Thursday night.

Then he moved on to the Washington Armory, where well over 6,000 diners were jammed in — at $100 a plate — to eat charcoal-broiled heart of filet mignon and hear some political talk.

And they paid plenty. Bailey told reporters the dinner netted some $650,000 for Democratic congressional campaign war chests.

Democratic officials said about 8,800 people attended the twin dinners.

Silver Coin Cut Approved By Senate

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate has passed a bill which would eliminate silver from dimes and quarters and cut the silver content of half dollars.

Passage came late Thursday on a 74-9 vote. The bill was sent to the House, where a similar measure may come up for debate next week.

Under the Senate bill, the 90 per cent silver content of the half dollar would be reduced to 40 per cent, as requested by President Johnson. The House bill, which also would remove the silver from dimes and quarters as asked by Johnson, includes an amendment which would eliminate all of the silver from half dollars.

The President had called for the reduction of silver in coins on June 3. In a special message to Congress, he urged quick action in view of the rapidly diminishing Treasury stock of silver. He also expressed concern that a prolonged debate might encourage the hoarding of silver coins.

Western senators made six unsuccessful efforts to revise the bill more to their liking.

But their key proposal, to keep 40 per cent silver in the dime and quarter as well as the half dollar, was rejected 57 to 34.

The new dimes and quarters are not expected to come into use until next year. With a copper core and coated with an alloy of nickel and copper, they will resemble a nickel in surface appearance but will be unchanged in size. Present vending machines will accept these, the Treasury says.

Viet Cong Execution

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The Viet Cong has executed U.S. Army Sgt. Harold George Bennett in reprisal for the execution of several Red terrorists by the South Vietnamese government, Hanoi Radio announced today. It warned that other Americans might suffer the same fate.

"This is obviously a wanton act of murder if this is confirmed," the U.S. Embassy said after hearing the report of Bennett's execution.

On the battlefronts, U.S. spokesmen reported that three more Americans were killed over the past 24 hours, a fourth was missing and six were wounded.

Bennett, son of Pauline H. Bennett of Perryville, Ark., was captured Dec. 29 during the battle of Binh Gia, which cost an estimated 200 South Vietnamese lives

All Are Believed Killed

EL TORO, Calif. AP -- The Marine air station here said the wreckage of a C135 Military Air Transport Service jet transport carrying 72 Marines and 12 Air Force personnel was found today approximately 4 1/2 miles north of here. There was no report of survivors.

The downed plane was located in mountainous terrain between El Toro and Irvine Lake.

Rescue aircraft and vehicles have been dispatched to the area, a spokesman at the air station said.

The plane left El Toro, a Marine base, at approximately 2:45 a.m. today and radar contact was lost shortly thereafter. It was bound for Honolulu, Hawaii.

The Air Force said the jet aircraft, the military version of the Boeing 707, was based at McGuire Air Force base in New Jersey.

No Boycott By Doctors

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Medical Association has decided not to urge doctors to boycott Medicare, and AMA leaders have restated their willingness to discuss the program with President Johnson.

But the 234-member House of Delegates, policy-making body of the AMA, rejected a resolution "petitioning" Johnson for a conference on the administration bill that appears near final congressional approval.

At the final session of the annual AMA convention, the house advised each doctor to be guided by his conscience on how to face Medicare, long fought by the AMA.

Child's Death Held Accidental

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday after a coroner's inquest into the shooting of Shiela Diane Ergle, eight, of Rockford, Ill.

The child was shot in the chest Tuesday. She was visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Sally Reese, 134 Sixth St., when she was shot.

The 12-gauge shotgun was loaded with small game ammunition, according to Chief of Police Arthur Bruce.

Scott county prosecuting attorney Fielding Potashnick said the girl was shot by a seven-year old boy playmate at approximately 2 p.m.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Matthews Baptist Church with burial in a Matthews cemetery.

Democrats Chuckle At GOP Squabble

Ousted GOP aide William Cody Kelly said party chairman Ray C. Bliss first praised him, then announced he had fired him for an evening foray into the office of the party finance director.

Kelly said working at Republican headquarters is more dangerous than fighting a war.

Frank J. Kovac, the finance man, said Wednesday that Kelly and three other party aides broke open his locked desk in the interoffice raid a week ago.

Bliss said he demanded and got Kelly's resignation because "he has taken action which is contrary to standards which I have established for my staff."

President Johnson and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey needled the Republicans about the whole thing.

"I checked out my desk tonight before I left," Johnson told a party fund-raising dinner Thursday night, "and I'm sure it's locked and no one is going to get into it."

"Kelly is the fellow that used the hairpin to get into the vault," said Humphrey. "I hate to say it, but a man with that name ought to be a Democrat."

The vice president said Kelly might have been a Democratic agent, looking for lists of Republican donors.

Second Man Captured

JASPER, Ark. (AP) — The second of three men wanted in connection with a bank robbery was captured near hear early today.

Bruton, 25, of Branson, Mo., said he had been without food for almost 72 hours.

Bruton, Larry Dale Peckham, 23, of Wichita, Kan., and Chester L. Durbin, home town unavailable, have been charged with robbing a bank at Mountain View of $2,500 early Wednesday.

The highway department announced that route AA, one mile south of the intersection of Interstate Route 55 and 57, will be open in the morning.

100 Greet President

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Probably less than 100 citizens were at Municipal Airport this morning to see President Johnson off for San Francisco.

It was difficult to make an accurate estimate because there were so many newsmen, and others directly concerned with the President's trip, in the crowd. However, people had been lined five and six deep around his hotel as he departed.

Johnson first helped former president Harry S. Truman into the car, then walked across the street and made his way to the end of the block shaking hands — sometimes with both hands at the same time.

Finally Johnson got into the back seat of the car with Truman and Sen. Frank Carlson. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, sat in front with the driver and a secret service man.

Blast Rips Cafe

SAIGON, Viet Nam. AP -- A mighty explosion -- possibly caused by three separate terrorist bombs -- ripped through a crowded floating restaurant on the Saigon River tonight. Witnesses said they believe up to 40 persons, including many Americans, were killed.

Officials said their first count showed 17 persons dead and 24 wounded. They expected this tally to go higher.

Some of the casualties were mothers and their children who had been strolling along a riverside boulevard when the explosion roared out at 8:15 p.m.

U.S. police officials at the scene said that a "shape charge" which explodes in a predetermined position like a Claymore mine, was probably the main explosive. That charge was believed to have been placed at the riverbank near a gangblank leading to the restaurant.

Authorities believe there were two other explosions, both of them bicycle bombs. One of these loaded bicycles probably was parked beside a riverside stall in front of the floating restaurant, the My Canh, and the other on the other side of the boulevard.

Witnesses at the explosion scene said 10 bodies were stacked up on the approach to the My Canh restaurant. An estimated 20 more were inside the restaurant itself.

Witnesses said many of the dead appeared to be Americans, and that it probably was the bloodiest and costliest terrorist blast against Americans in South Viet Nam.

UN Keynote By Johnson

SAN FRANCISCO AP -- U.N. diplomats looked hopefully today to President Johnson to keynote the world organization's 20th birthday celebration with a plan for ending its financial crisis and rebuilding its sagging prestige.

The President is to address the delegates of 114 countries in the San Francisco Opera House where the U.N. Charter was drafted two decades ago.

Johnson's speech was scheduled for 12:30 p.m.

Although the contents of his speech were not released in advance there was widespread belief that a major theme would be the difficulties of the United Nations and possible action to strengthen the organization.

Greece's U. N. ambassador, Alexis S. Liatis, agreed with Secretary - General U Thant and others that the financial crisis was the most urgent problem facing the United Nations at the moment and said: "We all expect something tomorrow morning from President Johnson."

Observers agreed that the atmosphere was far different from the optimism in San Francisco in 1945, but they noted a brighter outlook than that of a few months ago.

Drainage Plan Up For Vote

CHARLESTON -- A pumping station to drain the northeastern corner of Mississippi County will be constructed if voters in levee district No. 3 approve a $300,000 bond issue July 27.

The voting will be at a special meeting of landowners in the levee district at 10 a.m. at the Wyatt Elementary school.

According to district secretary Jim Bogle, the proposed pumping station would include three 48-inch pumps, and would be located about 100 years north of Pea Field Sewer. Some 30,000 acres of land from Alfalfa Center to the Pea Field floodgate would be provided with better drainage if the plan is approved, he said. Bogle emphasized the bonds would be retired from income from fuse-plug land owned by the levee district. No increase in taxes is involved, he said.

The pumps would be electrically operated, Bogle said, using electricity supplies by the REA.

Engineers William K. Klingner and Associates of Quincy, Ill., prepared specifications for the project. These call for weather-proof electric motors and starting controls and chain link fence around the installation. Each of the three pumps would cost $17,000, and each of three 400-horsepower electric motors would cost $18,000.

The engineers considered diesel operation, Bogle said, but decided that over the 30-year period the electrical operation would be less expensive.

The total amount of electrical equipment is estimated at $156,000, according to the engineering firm, with structure, including construction of a suction bay on the river side of the installation, totaling $170,000. The three pipelines would be laid over the levee, to an underwater point some 240 feet from the pumps.

The plant rating, according to the specifications, is 180,000 gallons per minute.

The proposed pumping plant will be located adjacent to the Pea Field floodgate structure to take maximum benefit of existing drainage structures which empty into the river at that point. As in the past, under normal conditions, this drainage through the existing four 60 - inch corrugated metal drainage pipes will be removed by gravity flow.

However, when a high river blocks the present floodgate structure, the pumps will be started to remove seepage and storm water runoff.

According to the engineering report, the pumps will be started when the interior water level reaches an elevation which would cause crop damage. Pumping will be required at any time the river level is at elevation 300 feet above mean sea level.

A study based on 36 years of Cairo gauge information shows that the number of days pumping required per year would have ranged from 30 in 1940 to 188 in 1951. During 1941 and 1954 no pumping would have been required. The average number of days pumping per year during that period would have been 80.

The majority of pumping days were found during the first half of each year, with March and April being the biggest months.

Aged Doctor Met Second Wife At Her Birth

With that jaunty declaration, 92-year-old Dr. William Bentley Griggs, still an active physician, conceded there might be some reason for the fuss that's being made over his 71 years of medical practice.

Doctors and laymen will gather at a public meeting in Hahnemann Medical College tonight to honor him, and there will be many felicitations to read, from around this country and from abroad.

"It's quite a lot of frosting to put on the cake of a plain old family doctor," he said in an interview at his combined home and office in suburban Jenkintown. "I have had a bit of experience, though, and I'm always after more.

Slender, alert, the humor of his Scotch-Irish blood ever-present, Dr. Griggs ranged over a variety of subjects, expressing his views with an animation characteristic of far younger men.

"As long as my mind is clear --and it is now, I assure you-- I'll not retire," he said. "After 90 I did slow up a bit. I take only office calls now, and have cut down on the number of patients. But I'm still a doctor.

"Retire at 65? Nonsense. My judgment and perception were at their best when I was 65, in my last years of teaching at Hahnemann Medical College. I wouldn't be where I am now if I had retired at 65 --or 75."

Dr. Griggs' first wife died in 1945. In 1958 he married Irene Smith, a widow, over whose birth he presided.

"I won't soon forget how we first met," said the doctor.

Lt. Charles Stoner, head of the Youth Aid Bureau for the metropolitan area, said the group apparently started two years ago "as just a kids' game. But the older the youngsters got, the worse they got. They got away with a few things and, before they knew it, they were in trouble over their heads."

Stoner said Thursday night the club seemingly has a large membership among students at Madison High School serving the suburb east of Nashville.

Most families living in the area are considered middle class but the officer said many of the club members came from well-to-do homes.

The club's activities came to light when a 15-year-old boy was questioned in connection with several automobile thefts. He admitted being a club member.

Stoner said the ringleader of the club-also a 15-year-old boy -- has admitted breaking into "40 to 60 cars in the past two years."

Officers also obtained a file from the boy which contained information on "50 to 60" girls.

Prepare Shell Of Church For Removal To Fulton

LONDON AP -- The war-blackened shell of St. Mary Aldermanbury Church is being perpared for dismantling and shipment to Fulton, Mo., where it will rise anew as a memorial to Sir Winston Churchill.

The Anglican Church, near the city of London Guildhall, was destroyed by an incendiary bomb during a Nazi air raid in 1941 and was abandoned. The actual dismantling begins in July.

It will be moved to Westminister College in Fulton, where the wartime Prime Minister delivered his famed Iron Curtain speech March 5, 1946. Churchill said in that speech: "From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an Iron Curtain has descended across the Continent. . . . ."

Marshall Sisson, the architect responsible for removing and restoring the church, says the operation will involve numbering each stone before packing for shipment. Total weight of the masonry, some of which is in poor condition, is estimated at 650 tons.

Exterior and supporting columns will be shipped in one vessel across the Atlantic, through the St. Lawrence Seaway, the Great Lakes and then down the Mississippi River to St. Louis. Plaster and woodwork salvage from the interior and some new stained glass windows will follow as a separate shipment.

There are hopes that some form of dedication ceremony can be held at Fulton in time to mark the 20th anniversary of Churchill's speech.

Last year, President Johnson issued an appeal for contributions of $1 1/2 million for the project. The amount collected so far is half that amount.

C. of C. Acts
Support Issue

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce have urged citizens to approve a bond issue for water and sewage system improvements.

Chamber manager Jim Musick made the announcement yesterday at a Chamber luncheon membership meeting. He read the resolution to the 32 members and guests present.

Henry C. Maddox, Jefferson City, director of Missouri's Commerce and Industrial Development department, outlined the broad acres an industry investigates before locating in a new site.

"There are more than 600 factors an industrialist considers in a town," he said, "and there are 15,000 organizations like this Chamber of Commerce (across the nation) dedicated to bringing new business to their community."

The speaker then reminded the group of a national study last year which showed that 150 new industries located last year. "That means," Maddox explained, if you are an average town, getting your average, and doing average, a new industry will locate in Sikeston once every 100 years."

To "beat the averages" the director said a community must have "something in it that will attract an industry." Something more than meeting the educational requirements, governmental functions, and normal growth rate is needed, he said.

"The community must have a spirit of progress. There must be a constant drive by the community's leaders to improve and to progress. The local leadership must sell the city and prepare the community for industrial development," Maddox said.

Top Hearnes Money Lid

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House tackled compromise appropriation bills today exceeding Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' general revenue budget of about $3.6 million.

Rep. Bernard (Doc) Simcoe, D - Callaway, House appropriations chairman, said the final figures would be less than $5 million over the governor's recommendations.

That would include $10 million in the final catchall bill to cover extra state aid for schools as suggested by the governor. The bill boosting the foundation program formula by that amount was passed by the House and sent to the governor's desk Thursday.

Originally the House wanted to allot $24.5 million extra for school aid but the governor said the state couldn't afford that.

The conference committee agreement made few major changes.

"There wasn't too much difference between the two houses," said Sen. J. F. Patterson, D - Caruthersville, Senate appropriations chairman. "There wasn't a lot of room to argue."

Without the $17 million odd in the final catchall bill, the major money bills as compromised carry $265,963,000 from general revenue, or $3,650,000 more than the governor recommended.

This does not include fees and federal funds which are expected to raise the total one-year budget to something around $875 million.

Alabama Police Join Search

CAPE GIRARDEAU — As Huntsville, Ala., police continued their search for two men and two women reportedly seen the day Elizabeth Ann Gill vanished, the total reward money offered has climbed to $1,695.

According to Police Chief Irvin E. Beard, the four were last seen in a late model Thunderbird and a Chevrolet pickup with Alabama license plates originally issued to other vehicles. Alabama law requires license plates to remain on the vehicle to which they were issued.

The two couples were reportedly selling purses door to door, and were not seen after Betsy disappeared June 13.

Cape Girardeau police have checked leads from Baltimore, Md., to Dallas, Tex., since the child vanished, but each has produced nothing.

Orders All Papers Close

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP-- Premier Nguyen Cao Ky threw a brick into a political hornet's nest when he ordered all 36 of Saigon's Vietnamese-language newspapers to close July 1.

For sheer political audacity, the new military premier's action Thursday was unequaled, even under President Ngo Dinh Dien's dictatorship.

Each newspaper is essentially the organ of a political faction or pressure group. Most publishers are also leading political figures.

The Roman Catholics, the Buddhists, the Cao Daists and the Hoa Haos also have their newspapers.

Since Diem's overthrow in 1963, the Saigon government has changed five times. Each time, the press has played a big role. The bulk of the newspapers opposed each government.

This was probably the major factor in Ky's decision to play rough. By closing all papers for one month, until they can be reorganized along lines satisfactory to the government, he avoids the risk of showing partiality to any faction.

Ky decreed that during July there would be two official newspapers -- one for the "rear" meaning Saigon and one for the "front" presumably meaning the rest of the nation.

Communists Warm Up Old Dispute

BERLIN AP -- The East German Communists threatened today to tie up barge and rail shipments to West Berlin. They also suggested that the four occupation powers give them control of air traffic to West Berlin.

The threat to barge and rail shipments was made by Transport Minister Edwin Kramer in a speech to the Communist party Central Committee published by Neues Deutschland, the party newspaper.

Kramer said permits for barge traffic between West Germany and West Berlin issued by the four occupation powers would not be acceptable after June 30.

He warned that East Germany would take necessary measures if the West German government does not reach agreement with the East German regime by then to establish new procedures.

Concerning rail traffic, the East Germans went to increase freight rates by about 20 per cent, contrary to four-power rules.

The threat of the air corridors came from East Germany's new foreign minister, Otto Winzer, who told the Central Committee the Berlin Air Safety Center which controls the air routes lost its basis of operation when the Allied Control Council for Berlin ceased to function in 1948.

After the council ceased to operate, the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union continued to operate the Air Safety Center.

The military operations along the superhighway subsided Thursday night. Western diplomats were puzzled about its meaning, but the West German government said the situation was serious and called for countermeasures.

Four Injured In Accidents

The highway patrol of troop E reported four persons were injured in two area automobile accidents yesterday.

In an accident on highway A, three miles east of Uniontown at 2:30 p.m., a 1956 Chevrolet driven by Harold Heise, 35, Uniontown, and a 1964 GMC truck, driven by Donald J. Manning, 30, Perryville sideswiped. The impact caused the truck to run off the road and hit a tree.

Injured were Heise and his son Ricky, four, the father received arm cuts, and the son head cuts. Manning received head cuts and an arm injury. All were taken to the Perry County Memorial hospital in Perryville.

In a single car accident on Route N, six miles north of Charleston, at 3:15 p.m., Renda Ward, 18, Poplar Bluff, suffered a mild concussion. She was a passenger in a 1964 Volkswagen, driven by Freda Wilkerson, 25, Charleston. She was taken to a Charleston clinic and released.

The accident occurred as the car was rounding a curve and met another car. The Volkswagen struck loose gravel, skidded and overturned.

Johnson Truman Confer

KANSAS CITY AP -- President Johnson marked the 20th birthday of the United Nations today by conferring here with Harry S. Truman, who was chief executive when the U.N. was born.

Johnson told reporters he and Truman "talked about our problems in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic." He said they also reminisced about some of Truman's historic acts as chief executive.

Truman, beaming, said that "in my historic memory" no president ever made a greater impact than Johnson during his first months in the White House.

From Missouri, Johnson was bound for San Francisco to address U.N. anniversary ceremonies.

The chief executive, rising early, visited the coffee shop of the Muehlebach Hotel, where he spent the night, about 6 a.m. He sat down for his morning coffee then embarked on a stroll.

Johnson personally greeted scores of shopkeepers and pedestrians during his stroll.

Today was the first meeting between Johnson and Truman since the President called on Truman at a Kansas City hospital last Oct. 21 while Truman was recovering from a fall.

Redistricting In Tangle

JEFFERSON CITY AP -- The problem of House redistricting is all tangled up again in the Missouri Legislature.

The Senate refused to accept a compromise version Thursday that would have allowed a 168-member House to reapportion itself every 10 years. That headed the issue for a new try at conference committee settlement.

Opponents defeated the first plan 12-21. They advocated a system, recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, of setting up a bipartisan commission to do the redistricting job. That is the way the Senate is being revamped now.

Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty, said he understood the Senate Redistricting Commission will not submit its report until the people act on the proposed constitutional amendment setting up a 168-member House --five more members than at present.

Waters said he had heard a special election on the constitutional amendment would be held in August or as soon as the legal requirements can be met.

The basic difference is that House wants to redistrict itself and the Senate opponents of the plan say a bipartisan commission could do a fairer job with less gerrymandering.

Congress Wins Praise

"This 89th Congress will leap into history as the most effective and the most rewarding Congress in the history of our nation," Johnson told 2,500 Democrats crowded into a hotel ballroom Thursday night.

Then he moved on to the Washington Armory, where well over 6,000 diners were jammed in — at $100 a plate — to eat charcoal-broiled heart of filet mignon and hear some political talk.

Silver Coin Cut Approved By Senate

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate has passed a bill which would eliminate silver from dimes and quarters and cut the silver content of half dollars.

Passage came late Thursday on a 74-9 vote. The bill was sent to the House, where a similar measure may come up for debate next week.

Under the Senate bill, the 90 per cent silver content of the half dollar would be reduced to 40 per cent, as requested by President Johnson. The House bill, which also would remove the silver from dimes and quarters as asked by Johnson, includes an amendment which would eliminate all of the silver from half dollars.

The President had called for the reduction of silver in coins on June 3. In a special message to Congress, he urged quick action in view of the rapidly diminishing Treasury stock of silver. He also expressed concern that a prolonged debate might encourage the hoarding of silver coins.

Western senators made six unsuccessful efforts to revise the bill more to their liking.

But their key proposal, to keep 40 per cent silver in the dime and quarter as well as the half dollar, was rejected 57 to 34.

The new dimes and quarters are not expected to come into use until next year. With a copper core and coated with an alloy of nickel and copper, they will resemble a nickel in surface appearance but will be unchanged in size. Present vending machines will accept these, the Treasury says.

Viet Cong Execution

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The Viet Cong has executed U.S. Army Sgt. Harold George Bennett in reprisal for the execution of several Red terrorists by the South Vietnamese government, Hanoi Radio announced today. It warned that other Americans might suffer the same fate.

"This is obviously a wanton act of murder if this is confirmed," the U.S. Embassy said after hearing the report of Bennett's execution.

On the battlefronts, U.S. spokesmen reported that three more Americans were killed over the past 24 hours, a fourth was missing and six were wounded.

Bennett, son of Pauline H. Bennett of Perryville, Ark., was captured Dec. 29 during the battle of Binh Gia, which cost an estimated 200 South Vietnamese lives

All Are Believed Killed

EL TORO, Calif. AP -- The Marine air station here said the wreckage of a C135 Military Air Transport Service jet transport carrying 72 Marines and 12 Air Force personnel was found today approximately 4 1/2 miles north of here. There was no report of survivors.

The downed plane was located in mountainous terrain between El Toro and Irvine Lake.

Rescue aircraft and vehicles have been dispatched to the area, a spokesman at the air station said.

The plane left El Toro, a Marine base, at approximately 2:45 a.m. today and radar contact was lost shortly thereafter. It was bound for Honolulu, Hawaii.

No Boycott By Doctors

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Medical Association has decided not to urge doctors to boycott Medicare, and AMA leaders have restated their willingness to discuss the program with President Johnson.

But the 234-member House of Delegates, policy-making body of the AMA, rejected a resolution "petitioning" Johnson for a conference on the administration bill that appears near final congressional approval.

At the final session of the annual AMA convention, the house advised each doctor to be guided by his conscience on how to face Medicare, long fought by the AMA.

Child's Death Held Accidental

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday after a coroner's inquest into the shooting of Shiela Diane Ergle, eight, of Rockford, Ill.

The child was shot in the chest Tuesday. She was visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Sally Reese, 134 Sixth St., when she was shot.

The 12-gauge shotgun was loaded with small game ammunition, according to Chief of Police Arthur Bruce.

Scott county prosecuting attorney Fielding Potashnick said the girl was shot by a seven-year old boy playmate at approximately 2 p.m.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Matthews Baptist Church with burial in a Matthews cemetery.

Democrats Chuckle At GOP Squabble

Ousted GOP aide William Cody Kelly said party chairman Ray C. Bliss first praised him, then announced he had fired him for an evening foray into the office of the party finance director.

Kelly said working at Republican headquarters is more dangerous than fighting a war.

Frank J. Kovac, the finance man, said Wednesday that Kelly and three other party aides broke open his locked desk in the interoffice raid a week ago.

Bliss said he demanded and got Kelly's resignation because "he has taken action which is contrary to standards which I have established for my staff."

President Johnson and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey needled the Republicans about the whole thing.

"I checked out my desk tonight before I left," Johnson told a party fund-raising dinner Thursday night, "and I'm sure it's locked and no one is going to get into it."

"Kelly is the fellow that used the hairpin to get into the vault," said Humphrey. "I hate to say it, but a man with that name ought to be a Democrat."

The vice president said Kelly might have been a Democratic agent, looking for lists of Republican donors.

Second Man Captured

JASPER, Ark. (AP) — The second of three men wanted in connection with a bank robbery was captured near hear early today.

Bruton, 25, of Branson, Mo., said he had been without food for almost 72 hours.

Bruton, Larry Dale Peckham, 23, of Wichita, Kan., and Chester L. Durbin, home town unavailable, have been charged with robbing a bank at Mountain View of $2,500 early Wednesday.

The highway department announced that route AA, one mile south of the intersection of Interstate Route 55 and 57, will be open in the morning.

100 Greet President

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Probably less than 100 citizens were at Municipal Airport this morning to see President Johnson off for San Francisco.

It was difficult to make an accurate estimate because there were so many newsmen, and others directly concerned with the President's trip, in the crowd. However, people had been lined five and six deep around his hotel as he departed.

Johnson first helped former president Harry S. Truman into the car, then walked across the street and made his way to the end of the block shaking hands — sometimes with both hands at the same time.

Finally Johnson got into the back seat of the car with Truman and Sen. Frank Carlson. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, sat in front with the driver and a secret service man.

Blast Rips Cafe

SAIGON, Viet Nam, AP -- A mighty explosion -- possibly caused by three separate terrorist bombs -- ripped through a crowded floating restaurant on the Saigon River tonight. Witnesses said they believe up to 40 persons, including many Americans, were killed.

Officials said their first count showed 17 persons dead and 24 wounded. They expected this tally to go higher.

Some of the casualties were mothers and their children who had been strolling along a riverside boulevard when the explosion roared out at 8:15 p.m.

U.S. police officials at the scene said that a "shape charge" which explodes in a predetermined position like a Claymore mine, was probably the main explosive. That charge was believed to have been placed at the riverbank near a gangblank leading to the restaurant.

Authorities believe there were two other explosions, both of them bicycle bombs. One of these loaded bicycles probably was parked beside a riverside stall in front of the floating restaurant, the My Canh, and the other on the other side of the boulevard.

Witnesses at the explosion scene said 10 bodies were stacked up on the approach to the My Canh restaurant. An estimated 20 more were inside the restaurant itself.

Witnesses said many of the dead appeared to be Americans, and that it probably was the bloodiest and costliest terrorist blast against Americans in South Viet Nam.

UN Keynote By Johnson

SAN FRANCISCO AP -- U.N. diplomats looked hopefully today to President Johnson to keynote the world organization's 20th birthday celebration with a plan for ending its financial crisis and rebuilding its sagging prestige.

The President is to address the delegates of 114 countries in the San Francisco Opera House where the U.N. Charter was drafted two decades ago.

Johnson's speech was scheduled for 12:30 p.m.

Although the contents of his speech were not released in advance there was widespread belief that a major theme would be the difficulties of the United Nations and possible action to strengthen the organization.

Greece's U. N. ambassador, Alexis S. Liatis, agreed with Secretary - General U Thant and others that the financial crisis was the most urgent problem facing the United Nations at the moment and said: "We all expect something tomorrow morning from President Johnson."

Observers agreed that the atmosphere was far different from the optimism in San Francisco in 1945, but they noted a brighter outlook than that of a few months ago.

Drainage Plan Up For Vote

CHARLESTON -- A pumping station to drain the northeastern corner of Mississippi County will be constructed if voters in levee district No. 3 approve a $300,000 bond issue July 27.

The voting will be at a special meeting of landowners in the levee district at 10 a.m. at the Wyatt Elementary school.

According to district secretary Jim Bogle, the proposed pumping station would include three 48-inch pumps, and would be located about 100 years north of Pea Field Sewer. Some 30,000 acres of land from Alfalfa Center to the Pea Field floodgate would be provided with better drainage if the plan is approved, he said. Bogle emphasized the bonds would be retired from income from fuse-plug land owned by the levee district. No increase in taxes is involved, he said.

The pumps would be electrically operated, Bogle said, using electricity supplies by the REA.

Engineers William K. Klingner and Associates of Quincy, Ill., prepared specifications for the project. These call for weather-proof electric motors and starting controls and chain link fence around the installation. Each of the three pumps would cost $17,000, and each of three 400-horsepower electric motors would cost $18,000.

The engineers considered diesel operation, Bogle said, but decided that over the 30-year period the electrical operation would be less expensive.

The total amount of electrical equipment is estimated at $156,000, according to the engineering firm, with structure, including construction of a suction bay on the river side of the installation, totalling $170,000. The three pipelines would be laid over the levee, to an underwater point some 240 feet from the pumps.

The plant rating, according to the specifications, is 180,000 gallons per minute.

The proposed pumping plant will be located adjacent to the Pea Field floodgate structure to take maximum benefit of existing drainage structures which empty into the river at that point. As in the past, under normal conditions, this drainage through the existing four 60 - inch corrugated metal drainage pipes will be removed by gravity flow.

However, when a high river blocks the present floodgate structure, the pumps will be started to remove seepage and storm water runoff.

According to the engineering report, the pumps will be started when the interior water level reaches an elevation which would cause crop damage. Pumping will be required at any time the river level is at elevation 300 feet above mean sea level.

A study based on 36 years of Cairo gauge information shows that the number of days pumping required per year would have ranged from 30 in 1940 to 188 in 1951. During 1941 and 1954 no pumping would have been required. The average number of days pumping per year during that period would have been 80.

The majority of pumping days were found during the first half of each year, with March and April being the biggest months.

Prepare Shell Of Church For Removal To Fulton

LONDON AP -- The war-blackened shell of St. Mary Aldermanbury Church is being perpared for dismantling and shipment to Fulton, Mo., where it will rise anew as a memorial to Sir Winston Churchill.

The Anglican Church, near the city of London Guildhall, was destroyed by an incendiary bomb during a Nazi air raid in 1941 and was abandoned. The actual dismantling begins in July.

It will be moved to Westminister College in Fulton, where the wartime Prime Minister delivered his famed Iron Curtain speech March 5, 1946. Churchill said in that speech: "From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an Iron Curtain has descended across the Continent. . . . ."

Marshall Sisson, the architect responsible for removing and restoring the church, says the operation will involve numbering each stone before packing for shipment. Total weight of the masonry, some of which is in poor condition, is estimated at 650 tons.

Exterior and supporting columns will be shipped in one vessel across the Atlantic, through the St. Lawrence Seaway, the Great Lakes and then down the Mississippi River to St. Louis. Plaster and woodwork salvage from the interior and some new stained glass windows will follow as a separate shipment.

There are hopes that some form of dedication ceremony can be held at Fulton in time to mark the 20th anniversary of Churchill's speech.

Last year, President Johnson issued an appeal for contributions of $1 1/2 million for the project. The amount collected so far is half that amount.

With that jaunty declaration, 92-year-old Dr. William Bentley Griggs, still an active physician, conceded there might be some reason for the fuss that's being made over his 71 years of medical practice.

Doctors and laymen will gather at a public meeting in Hahnemann Medical College tonight to honor him, and there will be many felicitations to read, from around this country and from abroad.

"It's quite a lot of frosting to put on the cake of a plain old family doctor," he said in an interview at his combined home and office in suburban Jenkintown. "I have had a bit of experience, though, and I'm always after more.

Slender, alert, the humor of his Scotch-Irish blood ever-present, Dr. Griggs ranged over a variety of subjects, expressing his views with an animation characteristic of far younger men.

"As long as my mind is clear --and it is now, I assure you-- I'll not retire," he said. "After 90 I did slow up a bit. I take only office calls now, and have cut down on the number of patients. But I'm still a doctor.

"Retire at 65? Nonsense. My judgment and perception were at their best when I was 65, in my last years of teaching at Hahnemann Medical College. I wouldn't be where I am now if I had retired at 65 --or 75."

Dr. Griggs' first wife died in 1945. In 1958 he married Irene Smith, a widow, over whose birth he presided.

"I won't soon forget how we first met," said the doctor.

Mrs. Warren E. Hearnes, the attractive wife of the governor is not only an accomplished musician but is getting as much favorable attention from the press as her husband. She is the former Betty Sue Cooper of Charleston, daughter of a Baptist minister.

Her latest triumph was an appearance in New York in which she related how the politics of art can be advanced through the art of politics. In a word, Betty Sue, "wowed" 'em.

She was in Manhattan for a four-day joint conference of the Arts Councils of America and the American Symphony Orchestra League. Almost a thousand delegates attended the session from 40 states and the District of Columbia.

A New York Times reporter described her as "the hit of the day" and described her as the "witty and attractive" woman that Southeast Missouri residents know her to be. She told how state arts council objectives could be advanced through the art of politics.

She recommended a politically inexperienced council work with experienced legislators but urged that a council not become a "political football." She correctly observed that support would come from both political parties. It will because there has been a sharply rising interest in culture in this country during the past decade.

Mrs. Hearnes spoke from successful experience. A state arts council is developing from the current session of the Missouri legislature.

She did more than speak convincingly.

She is a charming and effective ambassador for Missouri. She won the hearts as well as the minds of her listeners.

Progress exacts its high price from every generation of men. It decrees that man, to progress, must also work hard. This probably explains why progress comes almost always from adversity and almost never from affluence. And yet the whole atmosphere of this so-called war on poverty is to the effect that the key to progress is held by the common government, which in its superior wisdom, now comes forward to save us all from hard, grueling labor by arbitrarily doing away with poverty via fiat and education."

SUMMER JOB DISAPPOINTMENTS

CALIFORNIA will ask for no more out-of-state help for farm harvest work. The announcement by state employment director Albert Tieburg follows the decision to quit work by several "A-Teams" -- Athletes in Temporary Employment as Agricultural Manpower. The withdrawals were triggered by disillusionment over food, living conditions, and pay. Involved on the part of farmers is the federal requirement of a $1.40 an hour wage so long as out-of-state labor is required.

The U. S. Department of Labor in May had expressed surprise at its success in recruiting high school boys for farm labor. Within 10 days, 1,200 high schools had responded to a "picking pickles" recruitment program aimed at a summer labor force of 15,000 to 25,000 high school boys.

DISAPPOINTMENTS ALREADY ARE SHOWING across the country in job programs for the young, both federal and local. After more than 400 applicants had been screened in the Washington, D.C. area Job Corps program -- after five months -- only 32 youths had gone to camp. Some 345 had passed the first hurdle; many were expected to clear the rest of the red tape.

Youth Employment Project officials in Detroit said on June 20 that they had found only 30 of the 70 young men sought for summer training programs aimed at boosting youths into higher-paying jobs. In the same city spokesmen for the Neighborhood Youth Corps, which hoped to find 1,500 youths for a training program by June 15, came up with only 800.

More serious is the New York City disillusionment. With more than 70,000 youngsters out of school, out of work or underemployed, untrained, roaming the streets, very little headway has been made despite a $45 million outlay. By June 15 city and federal officials finally got together on a costly crash program to create more than 20,000 jobs. Whether or not too little, the program is late indeed.

According to the N. Y. Herald Tribune: "HARYOU - ACT and Mobilization for Youth, the new groups which offered so much hope for the future, already have become bogged down amid political, ideological and financial controversy. . . HARYOU-ACT, the massive, multi-million dollar Harlem project, has become a political football between City Hall and Rep. Adam Clayton Powell."

Reasons for disillusionment are many. In California the main complaint was over pay, although harvesters were promised 15¢ more per hour than the $1.25 stipulated under the federal poverty program. In Detroit -- at the $1.25 rate -- the reaction was: "You're crazy, man. I don't work for that kind of money."

Complaints at Job Corps camps ran to training schedules, latrine details, and the like.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON'S Council of Economic Advisers on Jan. 28 warned that absorption of teen-agers into high productivity jobs was the greatest test facing the nation's general economic and manpower policies. The number of teen-agers in the work force is expected to rise by 1 million to 7.5 million by next year.

It's much too early to assess the success of the temporary job training programs instituted in part to take the heat off city police this summer. But the early readings, particularly in the big cities where the pressures engendered by idleness and lack of direction are most dangerous, are hardly encouraging for the long-term view.

WHO IS WATCHING?

A lot of national advertisers have been entranced for years by television's box car audience claims. At last some one outside of the competitive advertising picture has told the Association of National Advertisers that it "ain't necessarily so" when it comes to the audience for commercials. This is just what newspaper salesmen, representatives and publishers have been telling them for years.

Dr. Gary A. Steiner, a professor of psychology at the University of Chicago, told ANA the assumption of a captive audience is an erroneous one:

"We cannot assume that program audience translates with some corrective factor into commercial audience. We can't simply apply an 80 percent, 70 percent or 40 percent figure to say that if we have so many thousands of viewers per dollar to the program, then we have so many fewer thousand viewers to the commercial, even though they may be in the room."

Newspapers discovered this years ago as the result of their own research. Many of them have made surveys of local audiences for highly rated network shows and through sponsor-identification questions found a heavy percentage of "tune-out ear," and the "flush factor," when the commercials came on.

Dr. Steiner noted that "audiences will avoid, fail to see and forget very rapidly those messages that run counter to their motivation, counter to their self-interest, those messages that are boring, threatening, or insulting." And judging from the complaints about television advertising from viewers there is a preponderance of that.

David Lawrence writes in U. S. News & World Report: "The United Nations is no longer an effective international instrument and never will as long as its principal members are unwilling to speak frankly about the paralysis of the organization and act courageously in pressing for solutions. There is no reason why the United States should bear the burden of maintaining peace all over the world. . . What is needed is a leadership among the free nations, which must organize themselves into a broad alliance that will be effective not merely on diplomatic but on economic and military lines. There is enough power in the free world to bring about peace without the needless sacrifice of human lives."

While inflation has cut the purchasing power of the dollar by more than half over the past quarter-century or so, paradoxically the value of money itself, at least in coins, has quintupled.

In 1933, the intrinsic value--the actual value of the metal, which has nothing to do with purchasing power--in 50 pennies was two cents. In 1964 it was 10 cents. The metal value of 10 nickels rose from one cent to five cents in the same period.

And where the metal in five dimes, two quarters or a half-dollar was worth nine cents in 1933, it is now worth 47 cents.

These last three coins, which contain about 90 per cent silver, tell a startling story of our time: Silver is simply becoming too valuable to be used as money.

Only a slight rise in the price of silver would make the intrinsic value of these coins exceed their face value--with a resultant hoarding that could raise hob with the economy.

United States consumption of silver for coins has increased drastically in recent years. Domestic industrial needs have grown less rapidly, but are going up. Add to this the industrial and coinage requirements of other nations.

Since silver is only a small by-product of copper, lead and zinc mining, and the amount that is mined every year is less than half the amount needed, the Free World will register a silver deficit of about 440 million ounces in 1965.

The 1.2-billion-ounce silver stock of the U. S. Treasury Department is the only supply that can make up this deficit. But at present rates of demand, this supply will be used up in three years.

A reduction of the silver content in coins to 30 per cent, as the silver mining industry has urged, would only postpone the depletion of the Treasury stockpile. Worse, it might cause a price rise in silver--or speculation of one--and lead to even worse hoarding than exists today and even the melting down of coins.

The only apparent solution seems to be to mint dimes, quarters and halves out of some nonsilver alloy. But this raises the problem of how to make them work in the nation's millions of vending machines without making the coins too costly to produce or requiring an expensive changeover in vending machine mechanisms.

Automation continues to toll its casualties. In Cleveland this spring, a man afraid of being fired literally ripped "the brains" out of the county auditor's major computer. And another more subtle individual decided to outwit his machine, a computer that determined automatically who in the company was to get raises and promotions. He merely jimmied the controls. When detected, the company officials took legal action against him. Seems all sorts of inept employes had moved up the administrative and salary scale. Apparently the "big wigs" didn't care to fulfill the stock boys' dreams of becoming president overnight!

H. L. Hunt Says

COMMUNIST POPULARITY

Apparently, tolerance of communism is on the rise, while resistance to communism is ebbing. In fact, the popularity of communism is rising in the United States.

More than coincidence attends the fact that crime is also on the rise in America, for there is now a recognition that communism plays an important part in the current crime wave. With Marxists in the vanguard of militant agitation aimed at destruction of our institutions and our laws, we can expect popularity of Bolshevism to go hand-in-hand with the weakening of the moral code and the erosion of law and order.

When people claim a right to disobey laws with which they disagree, they tear down the foundations of all laws. When they take the path of anarchy to flout their defiance, rather than working through the constitutional system to secure legislative repeal of an unjust or unpopular law, they take a giant step toward the complete mob-rule which is communism.

It is ironic that the rise in tolerance of communism in America comes at a time when some political interpreters envision the Russians converting their own communism into a "liberal" socialism.

Socialism is more dangerous in its "liberal" form than in its communistic state. There is little question about the total force behind a communist government, but "liberal" socialism is more likely to produce new converts and strengthen the Kremlin's stranglehold.

In our own country, liberal socialism has made far greater inroads than has the straight communist approach. The Communist Party, USA, is aware of this fact and has, in recent years, taken a lesson from the success of Fabian socialists. Now the Communist Party stays behind the scenes of "popular" revolts which it helps to create, and chides its Trotskyite brethren for being "too militant." HLH

KHE SANH, South Viet Nam AP -- Capt. Nguyen Xuan Loc is a man who doesn't like his job but is so good at it they can't let him go on to something bigger.

He has won a kind of "Lawrence of Arabia" reputation in the mountainous northwest corner of this country and military victory if it comes depends on men like Capt. Loc.

He is tall, handsome, quick-witted and speaks good English. Loc, 33, had been an outstanding soldier for 10 years when he was picked to be district chief here. A district chief is roughly equivalent to a powerful county political boss in the United States.

Loc's assignment was a rough one. It was to win over and protect Montagnard tribespeople scattered in a thinly populated area of about 1,800 square miles. It is bordered on the west by Laos and on the north by the demilitarized zone along the 17th Parallel.

The captain is a native Vietnamese born in Hanoi. Giving him the district chief's job was like appointing someone named McCoy as a good-will envoy to the Hatfield family during that famous feud, for the poverty-ridden Montagnards traditionally dislike the Vietnamese and the Vietnamese look down on the Montagnards as illiterate savages.

But there are several hundred thousands of these tribespeople and how they go can have an important effect on this war.

To counter the initial distrust he knew he would meet, Loc appointed a Montagnard as his deputy and put others in important civic and military positions.

He also imported rice to feed the hungry tribespeople, convinced them to try more productive farming techniques and trained them to fight better.

The captain has made an impressive record in 20 months as district chief.

Before he came the Montagnards quickly lost 92 out of 150 weapons issued them by the Vietnamese government but of 250 weapons that he issued he said none had been lost.

"Our Montagnards used to fire only at Vietnamese Viet Cong but not at Montagnard Viet Cong" he said "but I have taught them that if we are to win Montagnards must fire at Montagnards if they are with the enemy.

"I feel that 90 per cent of the Montagnards are now loyal to me. Twice at the risk of their own lives the villagers have warned me of assassination attempts against me."

Loc would like to resume command in the Vietnamese army or take special training in the U. S. Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga., but his is the tragedy of the indispensable man. His present role is so important his superiors are afraid to promote him.

"I am not a politician," said the captain, "I do not like this job but it is my duty and I always do my duty.

"The Montagnards say that if I am replaced by someone they don't like they will turn in their weapons and refuse to help the government. But the people must stay loyal if we are to win."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Dominican Workers Rally To U.S.

Washington, D. C.: -- Propagandists of the bitterly anti-U. S. rebel forces in Santo Domingo are attempting to convince the world that their carefully - planned, three-day general strike was called by national labor leaders and that the scheduled stoppage fizzled because the labor chiefs were arrested.

Fact is that the strike was not called by national Dominican Republic labor leaders. They were not arrested. They are free.

They are serving their people in the capital and the provinces. Had they wished to they could have paralyzed virtually all land and sea transportation. They could have abruptly ended all plantation and farm work. They could have ended garbage collections. They could have shut all factories.

All this the national union chiefs could have accomplished had they wished to aid the rebels. But the union officials repudiated "those who will not return to stability and peace and who are bitterly anti-U.S."

Since these union officials are the leaders of over 105,000 out of the 160,000 unionized Dominican Republic workers, and since their followers stayed on the job and eschewed what was intended to be an anti-American demonstration, it can be assumed that U. S. intervention has been backed by the majority of the Dominican proletariat.

The national union chiefs who urged their people to defy the rebels' general strike call, head the National Confederation of Free Workers -- Conatral.

It was organized in November 1962 by 210 unions. Soon 118 more joined. Today Conatral has 420 affiliated unions.

Because the Conatral is strongly anti-Communist, and because it has refused to join in denouncing the U. S. as "imperialistic," some of its leaders have been assaulted.

Its headquarters at Avenida Mella, 40-42 altos, has been seized by rebel commandos. Its confidential files were carried to the rebels' central intelligence headquarters. Try telephoning its old numbers, 2-5367 and 9-7189, and see who answers.

The Conatral leaders were forced to operate outside the rebel zone. The government of Col. Caamano Deno appointed a minister of labor, Virgilio Meynardi, without consulting the Conatral. Why?

Conatral is the biggest and strongest labor federation on the island. The three unions which called the general strike are puny compared with the Free Workers Confederation.

One of the rebel labor forces is called "FOUPSA." It boasts of 30,000 members, but has less. And it failed to halt a bus, must less paralyze transport. Yet it is the labor movement of Juan Bosch.

In Latin America a politico without a labor movement is like a ball club without bats. Repudiation of FOUPSA is repudiation of ex-President Bosch. No longer can he claim to be talking in the name of the working people of the Dominican Republic.

Two other labor federations joined FOUPSA in the strike call. One, "La Union" has 1,000 members -- maybe. It is traumatically anti-U. S. So is the other Federation "CASC." Its leaders have been denouncing Washington for years.

The three pro-rebel federations also claim that their communications were cut off from the hinterland so the general strike call could not go through. However, I have it from devoted Dominicans that the left-wing unions have cells throughout the villages -- and that couriers were dispatched to the outlying countryside long in advance of the strike call.

This information comes to this column from honorable men in the Dominican Republic. It has never been reported that some 25 mayors of small Dominican cities were in the U.S. in September 1963. Some of them were my hosts in their country.

So, with the gracious assistance of Rockefeller executives, a festive reception was held for the mayors. Many of them have maintained contact with this column ever since. And they will attest to the repudiation of the rebels by the Dominican people.

This should be of significance to those who say America's intervention was resented -- and unilateral.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Twenty years ago, many of the world's statesmen were in San Francisco to sign the charter of the United Nations.

It was a period of great promise and they signed a document of great hope.

I was in San Francisco during part of the formation of the UN and I remember vividly the enthusiasm, the feeling that, despite the mistakes following the 1914-18 "war to end war," we would not make the same mistakes after World War II.

The United States this time would not welsh on the United Nations as it did on the League of Nations. The Senate would not become isolationist again, never would permit a little band of willful men to block the will of the majority in setting up the machinery of peace.

Twenty years have passed since then and today the lustre of the UN charter is tarnished, the earlier hope has dimmed.

There has been no time since the launching of the United Nations that it has been so frustrated, its staff members have felt so sterile.

The reasons are many and the faults are two-sided. They range from a haggle over money to the bypassing of peace-keeping machinery in Southeast Asia to the initial reliance on force in the Dominican Republic.

All of these, with the exception of the Dominican crisis, were inherited by the President. But in the eyes of history that makes no difference. If he fails, all the great programs he has launched at home — education, anti-poverty, improved labor relations — come crashing to the ground.

—ONLY SCENERY UNCHANGED—

After Bernard Baruch died, I went out in LaFayette Park and sat on a bench where he used to sit, looking at the White House. The park hadn't changed much — a rotund lady tourist stretched out on the grass taking a nap; a couple of stenographers snatched a sandwich in the shade; old men snoozed behind their newspapers; and the pigeons Baruch used to feed were still hungry.

Around the White House a new, temporary mesh wire fence was being erected. The old one was getting wobbly and rusty. There was a day when Baruch was in his prime and when I first came to Washington you could stroll through the White House grounds and up to the front door on your way to and from lunch. No guards challenged you on the stroll.

But no more. The problem of guarding the President has become too complex, the risks to his life too great.

This, to some extent, illustrates the complications of guarding the peace of the world, a far more complex job than it was twenty years ago.

Sitting on the bench I recalled one of the last stories told by Baruch to Elroy McCaw, the New York-Seattle TV magnate about the most important advice he had ever given to any president.

Shortly after the end of World War II, Baruch said, he got a telephone call from Gen. George Marshall, then Chief of Staff, later to become Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense. Marshall said he would like to talk to Baruch right away.

"I'll come down and see you," Baruch replied.

"No, I'll come up and see you in about an hour," said Marshall.

—ADVICE NEGATIVE—

When he arrived, Marshall told the elder statesman that President Truman had been worried about the increasing friction between the United States and Russia. There had been shooting between American and Russian troops in Germany and trouble over the access to Berlin. Truman wondered whether the United States might not have to fight Russia eventually and therefore whether it was not better to do so now. At that time the United States had the advantage of the atomic bomb.

Baruch's advice was negative.

"I would be against it for three reasons," he said. "In the first place, the American people are not ready for such a war. They have just finished a long war, with Russia as an ally.

"Second, the world is not ready for such a war. World opinion would never understand it if the United States should attack its ally now.

"Third," concluded Baruch, "it is my opinion that history will line up the United States and Russia on the one side and the Chinese on the other. Our eventual enemy will be the Chinks."

It is obvious from history that Truman and Marshall took Bernard Baruch's advice. And the present drift of history has shown that the chief problem facing Lyndon, the chief stumbling block to peace, as, as Baruch put it in his Manhattanese, "the Chinks."

—RAY OF UN SUNSHINE—

Despite the pessimism that pervades the United Nations on this its 20th anniversary, there are some optimistic phases of its work which the public doesn't know much about which offset the pessimism.

A modern elder statesman, Paul Hoffman, is the diplomatic architect chiefly responsible for this work. As head of the UN Special Fund he is directing 485 projects in some 130 underdeveloped countries and territories, all with money contributed voluntarily by UN members.

They range from development of fisheries in Argentina to irrigation advice for Cambodia to a National Forestry School in Colombia. More than 1,600 international experts carry on this work with around $150,000,000 to be contributed each year by UN members to help smaller nations help themselves.

Hoffman was picked to head the Marshall Plan by the late Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, the onetime Republican isolationist from Michigan who became one of the great champions of international cooperation.

It was a wise choice. Today Hoffman is carrying on the same kind of work, not for the United States alone, but for the United Nations.

—DICTATOR ROJAS MAY STAGE COMEBACK—

Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, another former dictator who governed Colombia with an iron fist for four years and usurped most of the Republic's best cattle ranches while he was at it, may be sitting in Bogota's presidential palace again within a year.

Congressional elections are to be held in March and May of 1966. If Rojas and his new allies — dissident factions of both the liberal and conservative parties — can substantially increase their present strength in the Chamber of Deputies, they will call for President Guillermo Valencia's immediate resignation.

(Valencia, a conservative, was elected in 1962 by both major parties, acting under a "reconciliation pact" signed four years earlier.

(Alberto Lleras Camargo, a liberal, served the first four-year term under the pact, and Valencia is supposed to be followed next year by another liberal.

(However, the national front's handpicked candidate for the succession, Carlos Lleras Restrepo, had to withdraw last month as both parties split and the coalition began falling apart.)

Together, the three-pronged opposition holds 126 of the Chamber's 282 seats. With just 16 more, they would have an absolute majority and could vote Valencia out of office if he refused to quit.

Some Colombian diplomats appointed by Valencia and loyal to the front admit privately that Rojas & Co. are likely to pick up as many as 30 seats — unless the President maintains the state of siege he declared late in May, in which case there will be no elections.

But such action would almost surely bring an uprising by the ex-dictator's followers, and no one is certain what the military would do in that case.

This possibility of total chaos is what Valencia meant when he said, on imposing the stage of siege, that the chances of a Communist takeover in Colombia are strong.

He knows that Colombia's Reds, closely allied with the so-called National Liberation Front in Venezuela, are preparing to attempt a coup if the country's present political confusion gets worse.

And Valencia, like many of his fellow countrymen, fears that Rojas would be quite capable of helping the Communists gain their ends, if he saw his own ambitions temporarily frustrated.

After more than 400 applicants had been screened in the Washington, D.C. area Job Corps program -- after five months -- only 32 youths had gone to camp. Some 345 had passed the first hurdle; many were expected to clear the rest of the red tape.

Youth Employment Project officials in Detroit said on June 20 that they had found only 30 of the 70 young men sought for summer training programs aimed at boosting youths into higher-paying jobs. In the same city spokesmen for the Neighborhood Youth Corps, which hoped to find 1,500 youths for a training program by June 15, came up with only 800.

More serious is the New York City disillusionment. With more than 70,000 youngsters out of school, out of work or underemployed, untrained, roaming the streets, very little headway has been made despite a $45 million outlay. By June 15 city and federal officials finally got together on a costly crash program to create more than 20,000 jobs. Whether or not too little, the program is late indeed.

According to the N. Y. Herald Tribune: "HARYOU - ACT and Mobilization for Youth, the new groups which offered so much hope for the future, already have become bogged down amid political, ideological and financial controversy. . . HARYOU-ACT, the massive, multi-million dollar Harlem project, has become a political football between City Hall and Rep. Adam Clayton Powell."

Reasons for disillusionment are many. In California the main complaint was over pay, although harvesters were promised 15¢ more per hour than the $1.25 stipulated under the federal poverty program. In Detroit -- at the $1.25 rate -- the reaction was: "You're crazy, man. I don't work for that kind of money."

Complaints at Job Corps camps ran to training schedules, latrine details, and the like.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON'S Council of Economic Advisers on Jan. 28 warned that absorption of teen-agers into high productivity jobs was the greatest test facing the nation's general economic and manpower policies. The number of teen-agers in the work force is expected to rise by 1 million to 7.5 million by next year.

It's much too early to assess the success of the temporary job training programs instituted in part to take the heat off city police this summer. But the early readings, particularly in the big cities where the pressures engendered by idleness and lack of direction are most dangerous, are hardly encouraging for the long-term view.

WHO IS WATCHING?

A lot of national advertisers have been entranced for years by television's box car audience claims. At last some one outside of the competitive advertising picture has told the Association of National Advertisers that it "ain't necessarily so" when it comes to the audience for commercials. This is just what newspaper salesmen, representatives and publishers have been telling them for years.

Dr. Gary A. Steiner, a professor of psychology at the University of Chicago, told ANA the assumption of a captive audience is an erroneous one:

"We cannot assume that program audience translates with some corrective factor into commercial audience. We can't simply apply an 80 percent, 70 percent or 40 percent figure to say that if we have so many thousands of viewers per dollar to the program, then we have so many fewer thousand viewers to the commercial, even though they may be in the room."

Newspapers discovered this years ago as the result of their own research. Many of them have made surveys of local audiences for highly rated network shows and through sponsor-identification questions found a heavy percentage of "tune-out ear," and the "flush factor," when the commercials came on.

Dr. Steiner noted that "audiences will avoid, fail to see and forget very rapidly those messages that run counter to their motivation, counter to their self-interest, those messages that are boring, threatening, or insulting." And judging from the complaints about television advertising from viewers there is a preponderance of that.

David Lawrence writes in U. S. News & World Report: "The United Nations is no longer an effective international instrument and never will as long as its principal members are unwilling to speak frankly about the paralysis of the organization and act courageously in pressing for solutions. There is no reason why the United States should bear the burden of maintaining peace all over the world. . . What is needed is a leadership among the free nations, which must organize themselves into a broad alliance that will be effective not merely on diplomatic but on economic and military lines. There is enough power in the free world to bring about peace without the needless sacrifice of human lives."

While inflation has cut the purchasing power of the dollar by more than half over the past quarter-century or so, paradoxically the value of money itself, at least in coins, has quintupled.

In 1933, the intrinsic value--the actual value of the metal, which has nothing to do with purchasing power--in 50 pennies was two cents. In 1964 it was 10 cents. The metal value of 10 nickels rose from one cent to five cents in the same period.

And where the metal in five dimes, two quarters or a half-dollar was worth nine cents in 1933, it is now worth 47 cents.

These last three coins, which contain about 90 per cent silver, tell a startling story of our time: Silver is simply becoming too valuable to be used as money.

Only a slight rise in the price of silver would make the intrinsic value of these coins exceed their face value--with a resultant hoarding that could raise hob with the economy.

United States consumption of silver for coins has increased drastically in recent years. Domestic industrial needs have grown less rapidly, but are going up. Add to this the industrial and coinage requirements of other nations.

Since silver is only a small by-product of copper, lead and zinc mining, and the amount that is mined every year is less than half the amount needed, the Free World will register a silver deficit of about 440 million ounces in 1965.

The 1.2-billion-ounce silver stock of the U. S. Treasury Department is the only supply that can make up this deficit. But at present rates of demand, this supply will be used up in three years.

A reduction of the silver content in coins to 30 per cent, as the silver mining industry has urged, would only postpone the depletion of the Treasury stockpile. Worse, it might cause a price rise in silver--or speculation of one--and lead to even worse hoarding than exists today and even the melting down of coins.

The only apparent solution seems to be to mint dimes, quarters and halves out of some nonsilver alloy. But this raises the problem of how to make them work in the nation's millions of vending machines without making the coins too costly to produce or requiring an expensive changeover in vending machine mechanisms.

This is the silver cloud with a black lining that presently hangs over the heads of the treasury Department and Congress.

During its first voyage of twelve months duration, the white hospital ship S. S. HOPE visited Indonesia and South VietNam. Its second voyage carried the ship to Peru for ten months.

Automation continues to toll its casualties. In Cleveland this spring, a man afraid of being fired literally ripped "the brains" out of the county auditor's major computer. And another more subtle individual decided to outwit his machine, a computer that determined automatically who in the company was to get raises and promotions. He merely jimmied the controls. When detected, the company officials took legal action against him. Seems all sorts of inept employes had moved up the administrative and salary scale. Apparently the "big wigs" didn't care to fulfill the stock boys' dreams of becoming president overnight!

H. L. Hunt Says

COMMUNIST POPULARITY

Apparently, tolerance of communism is on the rise, while resistance to communism is ebbing. In fact, the popularity of communism is rising in the United States.

More than coincidence attends the fact that crime is also on the rise in America, for there is now a recognition that communism plays an important part in the current crime wave. With Marxists in the vanguard of militant agitation aimed at destruction of our institutions and our laws, we can expect popularity of Bolshevism to go hand-in-hand with the weakening of the moral code and the erosion of law and order.

When people claim a right to disobey laws with which they disagree, they tear down the foundations of all laws. When they take the path of anarchy to flout their defiance, rather than working through the constitutional system to secure legislative repeal of an unjust or unpopular law, they take a giant step toward the complete mob-rule which is communism.

It is ironic that the rise in tolerance of communism in America comes at a time when some political interpreters envision the Russians converting their own communism into a "liberal" socialism.

Socialism is more dangerous in its "liberal" form than in its communistic state. There is little question about the total force behind a communist government, but "liberal" socialism is more likely to produce new converts and strengthen the Kremlin's stranglehold.

In our own country, liberal socialism has made far greater inroads than has the straight communist approach. The Communist Party, USA, is aware of this fact and has, in recent years, taken a lesson from the success of Fabian socialists. Now the Communist Party stays behind the scenes of "popular" revolts which it helps to create, and chides its Trotskyite brethren for being "too militant." HLH

KHE SANH, South Viet Nam AP -- Capt. Nguyen Xuan Loc is a man who doesn't like his job but is so good at it they can't let him go on to something bigger.

He has won a kind of "Lawrence of Arabia" reputation in the mountainous northwest corner of this country and military victory if it comes depends on men like Capt. Loc.

He is tall, handsome, quick-witted and speaks good English. Loc, 33, had been an outstanding soldier for 10 years when he was picked to be district chief here. A district chief is roughly equivalent to a powerful county political boss in the United States.

Loc's assignment was a rough one. It was to win over and protect Montagnard tribespeople scattered in a thinly populated area of about 1,800 square miles. It is bordered on the west by Laos and on the north by the demilitarized zone along the 17th Parallel.

The captain is a native Vietnamese born in Hanoi. Giving him the district chief's job was like appointing someone named McCoy as a good-will envoy to the Hatfield family during that famous feud, for the poverty-ridden Montagnards traditionally dislike the Vietnamese and the Vietnamese look down on the Montagnards as illiterate savages.

But there are several hundred thousands of these tribespeople and how they go can have an important effect on this war.

To counter the initial distrust he knew he would meet, Loc appointed a Montagnard as his deputy and put others in important civic and military positions.

He also imported rice to feed the hungry tribespeople, convinced them to try more productive farming techniques and trained them to fight better.

The captain has made an impressive record in 20 months as district chief.

Before he came the Montagnards quickly lost 92 out of 150 weapons issued them by the Vietnamese government but of 250 weapons that he issued he said none had been lost.

"Our Montagnards used to fire only at Vietnamese Viet Cong but not at Montagnard Viet Cong" he said "but I have taught them that if we are to win Montagnards must fire at Montagnards if they are with the enemy.

"I feel that 90 per cent of the Montagnards are now loyal to me. Twice at the risk of their own lives the villagers have warned me of assassination attempts against me."

Loc would like to resume command in the Vietnamese army or take special training in the U. S. Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga., but his is the tragedy of the indispensable man. His present role is so important his superiors are afraid to promote him.

"I am not a politician," said the captain, "I do not like this job but it is my duty and I always do my duty.

"The Montagnards say that if I am replaced by someone they don't like they will turn in their weapons and refuse to help the government. But the people must stay loyal if we are to win."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Dominican Workers Rally To U.S.

Washington, D. C.: -- Propagandists of the bitterly anti-U. S. rebel forces in Santo Domingo are attempting to convince the world that their carefully - planned, three-day general strike was called by national labor leaders and that the scheduled stoppage fizzled because the labor chiefs were arrested.

Fact is that the strike was not called by national Dominican Republic labor leaders. They were not arrested. They are free.

They are serving their people in the capital and the provinces. Had they wished to they could have paralyzed virtually all land and sea transportation. They could have abruptly ended all plantation and farm work. They could have ended garbage collections. They could have shut all factories.

All this the national union chiefs could have accomplished had they wished to aid the rebels. But the union officials repudiated "those who will not return to stability and peace and who are bitterly anti-U.S."

Since these union officials are the leaders of over 105,000 out of the 160,000 unionized Dominican Republic workers, and since their followers stayed on the job and eschewed what was intended to be an anti-American demonstration, it can be assumed that U. S. intervention has been backed by the majority of the Dominican proletariat.

The national union chiefs who urged their people to defy the rebels' general strike call, head the National Confederation of Free Workers -- Conatral.

It was organized in November 1962 by 210 unions. Soon 118 more joined. Today Conatral has 420 affiliated unions.

Because the Conatral is strongly anti-Communist, and because it has refused to join in denouncing the U. S. as "imperialistic," some of its leaders have been assaulted.

Its headquarters at Avenida Mella, 40-42 altos, has been seized by rebel commandos. Its confidential files were carried to the rebels' central intelligence headquarters. Try telephoning its old numbers, 2-5367 and 9-7189, and see who answers.

The Conatral leaders were forced to operate outside the rebel zone. The government of Col. Caamano Deno appointed a minister of labor, Virgilio Meynardi, without consulting the Conatral. Why?

Conatral is the biggest and strongest labor federation on the island. The three unions which called the general strike are puny compared with the Free Workers Confederation.

One of the rebel labor forces is called "FOUPSA." It boasts of 30,000 members, but has less. And it failed to halt a bus, must less paralyze transport. Yet it is the labor movement of Juan Bosch.

In Latin America a politico without a labor movement is like a ball club without bats. Repudiation of FOUPSA is repudiation of ex-President Bosch. No longer can he claim to be talking in the name of the working people of the Dominican Republic.

Two other labor federations joined FOUPSA in the strike call. One, "La Union" has 1,000 members -- maybe. It is traumatically anti-U. S. So is the other Federation "CASC." Its leaders have been denouncing Washington for years.

The three pro-rebel federations also claim that their communications were cut off from the hinterland so the general strike call could not go through. However, I have it from devoted Dominicans that the left-wing unions have cells throughout the villages -- and that couriers were dispatched to the outlying countryside long in advance of the strike call.

This information comes to this column from honorable men in the Dominican Republic. It has never been reported that some 25 mayors of small Dominican cities were in the U.S. in September 1963. Some of them were my hosts in their country.

So, with the gracious assistance of Rockefeller executives, a festive reception was held for the mayors. Many of them have maintained contact with this column ever since. And they will attest to the repudiation of the rebels by the Dominican people.

This should be of significance to those who say America's intervention was resented -- and unilateral.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Twenty years ago, many of the world's statesmen were in San Francisco to sign the charter of the United Nations.

It was a period of great promise and they signed a document of great hope.

I was in San Francisco during part of the formation of the UN and I remember vividly the enthusiasm, the feeling that, despite the mistakes following the 1914-18 "war to end war," we would not make the same mistakes after World War II.

The United States this time would not welsh on the United Nations as it did on the League of Nations. The Senate would not become isolationist again, never would permit a little band of willful men to block the will of the majority in setting up the machinery of peace.

Twenty years have passed since then and today the lustre of the UN charter is tarnished, the earlier hope has dimmed.

There has been no time since the launching of the United Nations that it has been so frustrated, its staff members have felt so sterile.

The reasons are many and the faults are two-sided. They range from a haggle over money to the bypassing of peace-keeping machinery in Southeast Asia to the initial reliance on force in the Dominican Republic.

All of these, with the exception of the Dominican crisis, were inherited by the President. But in the eyes of history that makes no difference. If he fails, all the great programs he has launched at home — education, anti-poverty, improved labor relations — come crashing to the ground.

—ONLY SCENERY UNCHANGED—

After Bernard Baruch died, I went out in LaFayette Park and sat on a bench where he used to sit, looking at the White House. The park hadn't changed much — a rotund lady tourist stretched out on the grass taking a nap; a couple of stenographers snatched a sandwich in the shade; old men snoozed behind their newspapers; and the pigeons Baruch used to feed were still hungry.

Around the White House a new, temporary mesh wire fence was being erected. The old one was getting wobbly and rusty. There was a day when Baruch was in his prime and when I first came to Washington you could stroll through the White House grounds and up to the front door on your way to and from lunch. No guards challenged you on the stroll.

But no more. The problem of guarding the President has become too complex, the risks to his life too great.

This, to some extent, illustrates the complications of guarding the peace of the world, a far more complex job than it was twenty years ago.

Sitting on the bench I recalled one of the last stories told by Baruch to Elroy McCaw, the New York-Seattle TV magnate about the most important advice he had ever given to any president.

Shortly after the end of World War II, Baruch said, he got a telephone call from Gen. George Marshall, then Chief of Staff, later to become Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense. Marshall said he would like to talk to Baruch right away.

"I'll come down and see you," Baruch replied.

"No, I'll come up and see you in about an hour," said Marshall.

—ADVICE NEGATIVE—

When he arrived, Marshall told the elder statesman that President Truman had been worried about the increasing friction between the United States and Russia. There had been shooting between American and Russian troops in Germany and trouble over the access to Berlin. Truman wondered whether the United States might not have to fight Russia eventually and therefore whether it was not better to do so now. At that time the United States had the advantage of the atomic bomb.

Baruch's advice was negative.

"I would be against it for three reasons," he said. "In the first place, the American people are not ready for such a war. They have just finished a long war, with Russia as an ally.

"Second, the world is not ready for such a war. World opinion would never understand it if the United States should attack its ally now.

"Third," concluded Baruch, "it is my opinion that history will line up the United States and Russia on the one side and the Chinese on the other. Our eventual enemy will be the Chinks."

It is obvious from history that Truman and Marshall took Bernard Baruch's advice. And the present drift of history has shown that the chief problem facing Lyndon, the chief stumbling block to peace, as, as Baruch put it in his Manhattanese, "the Chinks."

—RAY OF UN SUNSHINE—

Despite the pessimism that pervades the United Nations on this its 20th anniversary, there are some optimistic phases of its work which the public doesn't know much about which offset the pessimism.

A modern elder statesman, Paul Hoffman, is the diplomatic architect chiefly responsible for this work. As head of the UN Special Fund he is directing 485 projects in some 130 underdeveloped countries and territories, all with money contributed voluntarily by UN members.

They range from development of fisheries in Argentina to irrigation advice for Cambodia to a National Forestry School in Colombia. More than 1,600 international experts carry on this work with around $150,000,000 to be contributed each year by UN members to help smaller nations help themselves.

Hoffman was picked to head the Marshall Plan by the late Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, the onetime Republican isolationist from Michigan who became one of the great champions of international cooperation.

It was a wise choice. Today Hoffman is carrying on the same kind of work, not for the United States alone, but for the United Nations.

—DICTATOR ROJAS MAY STAGE COMEBACK—

Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, another former dictator who governed Colombia with an iron fist for four years and usurped most of the Republic's best cattle ranches while he was at it, may be sitting in Bogota's presidential palace again within a year.

Congressional elections are to be held in March and May of 1966. If Rojas and his new allies — dissident factions of both the liberal and conservative parties — can substantially increase their present strength in the Chamber of Deputies, they will call for President Guillermo Valencia's immediate resignation.

(Valencia, a conservative, was elected in 1962 by both major parties, acting under a "reconciliation pact" signed four years earlier.

(Alberto Lleras Camargo, a liberal, served the first four-year term under the pact, and Valencia is supposed to be followed next year by another liberal.

(However, the national front's handpicked candidate for the succession, Carlos Lleras Restrepo, had to withdraw last month as both parties split and the coalition began falling apart.)

Together, the three-pronged opposition holds 126 of the Chamber's 282 seats. With just 16 more, they would have an absolute majority and could vote Valencia out of office if he refused to quit.

Some Colombian diplomats appointed by Valencia and loyal to the front admit privately that Rojas & Co. are likely to pick up as many as 30 seats — unless the President maintains the state of siege he declared late in May, in which case there will be no elections.

But such action would almost surely bring an uprising by the ex-dictator's followers, and no one is certain what the military would do in that case.

This possibility of total chaos is what Valencia meant when he said, on imposing the stage of siege, that the chances of a Communist takeover in Colombia are strong.

He knows that Colombia's Reds, closely allied with the so-called National Liberation Front in Venezuela, are preparing to attempt a coup if the country's present political confusion gets worse.

And Valencia, like many of his fellow countrymen, fears that Rojas would be quite capable of helping the Communists gain their ends, if he saw his own ambitions temporarily frustrated.

The Modern Christian

Now that Christ is risen, just what is His relationship to us?

Christ is not someone who is inert. He is alive and active. Nor are the People of God stagnant, awaiting someone or something to enliven them. The activity of the Risen Christ is the action of the New People of God.

This action of God, the Risen Christ, is the dynamic of the Christian community. The mystery of the Resurrection is with us and we are living together in the risen life.

We do not have risen bodies. This comes in the final age of fulfillment. However, Christ's body is risen and our future life will be fulfilled in a like manner.

We can only be optimal when we realize that the activity of the Spirit, through the Risen Christ, has ushered us into new life. The resurrection of Christ was decision for men. The coming of the Spirit is only a part of this event unfolding itself in time. What God did in Christ, He does also in us.

However, and this is very important, He saves us not by another similar action, but by inserting us into that same mystery of Christ.

By Baptism a man is born into the life that flows from the Resurrection of Christ. We die with Christ, and we rise again to new life. These are not simply words or a promise in the future. This is a relationship with the Risen Christ and a relationship with the Spirit.

Do you remember Paul's promise of unending life to the people of Ephesus. It is the present possession of the Spirit. The Spirit is present in men now.

The Christ of whom we speak and whom we contact through prayer is living, and He is living in all of us today. This same Christ who is living and working in man is the Risen Christ.

BATTLE OF SEXES

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Three housewives in suburban Ferguson, Mo., are unhappy about how the city government is operating and propose to do something about it. They have filed as candidates for the city council to oppose three male incumbents in the April 6 election. Marilyn Soest, mother of six; Anita Gilbert, mother of five; and Ollie Bauer, mother of two, took all 13 children with them when they went to the city hall to file.

When taking small children on a long trip by car, hang a shoe bag on the back of the front seat. Fill with tiny articles such as small books, tiny autos and so on. New articles may be inexpensive. But since they are different from their usual ones, they are likely to hold the attention of weary children for a while and make the trip more pleasurable.

Attend Grand Session Of Job's Daughters

The annual Grand Session of the International Order of Job's Daughters of Missouri was held June 18, 19 and 20 in Kansas City. Bethel #27 of Sikeston was represented at the Session by Mr. and Mrs. Aquilla Grimes, Guardians of the Sikeston Bethel. Carol Werneck, Honored Queen; Melinda Morrison, Senior Princess; and Becky Sloan, Junior Princess accompanied the Grimes on their trip.

The Session begin Friday morning with a meeting of the Grand Bethel of Missouri and the meeting continued through the day breaking only for lunch and dinner. Installation for the newly elected Grand Bethel was held Friday night and the Sikeston girls assisted over 100 other Honored Queens and Princesses in forming a huge heart around the new officers. In this very impressive ceremony, the Job's Daughters wore their official regalia.

Missouri's Grand Council treated all of the "Jobies" to a luncheon Saturday in the Continental Hotel; and, on Saturday afternoon, "Jobies" were given special half-price tickets to either "The Greatest Story Ever Told" or "My Fair Lady."

The girls were entertained at a formal banquet Saturday evening; however, the highlight of the whole weekend came for the Sikeston girls on Saturday night when their own guardian, Mrs. Edith Grimes was installed as Grand Second Messenger. This is indeed an honor for Mrs. Grimes, and the Sikeston Job's Daughters are proud to know that she will be serving as a member of Missouri's Grand Council for the next twelve months.

Besides meeting many other "Jobies," and having a wonderful time, the Sikeston girls came back with many new ideas to be used to better their own Bethel.

Sikeston should be proud that their Job's Daughters are taking an active part in state wide and international activities.

St. Johns Bay Rum
made from the original Virgin Island formula
St. Johns Bay Rum is carefully distilled and blended from the oil in the leaves of bay trees — not a product of modern chemistry. Such trees are found in abundance in the Virgin Islands. Its spicy — though subtle — aroma is thoroughly masculine. After shave or bath it tingles the skin, then soothes it to a blissful refreshment. Packaged in a hand-woven palm frond jacket and available at fine shops. Eight ounces, three dollars; sixteen ounces, four dollars and fifty cents — plus tax.

The Modern Christian

Now that Christ is risen, just what is His relationship to us?

Christ is not someone who is inert. He is alive and active. Nor are the People of God stagnant, awaiting someone or something to enliven them. The activity of the Risen Christ is the action of the New People of God.

This action of God, the Risen Christ, is the dynamic of the Christian community. The mystery of the Resurrection is with us and we are living together in the risen life.

We do not have risen bodies. This comes in the final age of fulfillment. However, Christ's body is risen and our future life will be fulfilled in a like manner.

We can only be optimal when we realize that the activity of the Spirit, through the Risen Christ, has ushered us into new life. The resurrection of Christ was decision for men. The coming of the Spirit is only a part of this event unfolding itself in time. What God did in Christ, He does also in us.

However, and this is very important, He saves us not by another similar action, but by inserting us into that same mystery of Christ.

By Baptism a man is born into the life that flows from the Resurrection of Christ. We die with Christ, and we rise again to new life. These are not simply words or a promise in the future. This is a relationship with the Risen Christ and a relationship with the Spirit.

Do you remember Paul's promise of unending life to the people of Ephesus. It is the present possession of the Spirit. The Spirit is present in men now.

The Christ of whom we speak and whom we contact through prayer is living, and He is living in all of us today. This same Christ who is living and working in man is the Risen Christ.

Gagliano And Boyer Fined By Cards

Baseball, 1965, likely will go into the books as a Fine Year.

The Boston and Philadelphia stay-ups and the St. Louis sleepy-heads are the latest to be added to a list of fined players that already included the whistling New York Yankees and the basketball-playing New York Mets.

The latest developments—all revealed within the last three weeks -- came Thursday when about a half-dozen Red Sox players were fined for missing an early-morning bedcheck and it was reported that several members of the Phillies had been hit in the pocketbook for similar curfew violations.

Also joining the club that is fast losing its exclusivity were Ken Boyer, the Most Valuable Player in the National League last season, and Cardinal teammate Phil Gagliano — both fined by freshman Manager Red Schoendienst for not being alert.

In both the Boston and Philadelphia cases the players involved were not named. However, it was indicated that the levies against the Red Sox stayouts would run about $100 each while the reported after hours activities of the Phillie players would cost them about three days pay each, under Gene Mauch's penalty schedule.

Mauch has employed the three-days-pay system for breaking curfews at various times during his six-year tenure with the Phillies. For a player making in the neighborhood of $10,000 for the six-month baseball season, that would be about $133 per man.

The Yankees started the fining binge on June 8 when they revealed that three unidentified players had been fined $250 each for breaking training. That included drinking and whistling at waitresses.

Then came the revelation of the Mets' fines, with pitchers Al Jackson and Larry Bearnarth and first baseman Ed Kranepool socked $250 each for playing basketball during the winter.

Round 2 ended late Thursday when Schoendienst, whose defending world champion Cardinals are languishing in seventh place, said he had fined Boyer and Gagliano "not much — just to keep them alert."

Both penalties were imposed for mistakes at Milwaukee, Boyer for straying off second base when he lost count of the number of strikes on a batter, and Gagliano for stopping at second base on a hit-run single.

Sports Talk By DON SAVAGE

This season we will find many men from this area going to the Mississippi River or the Mingo area to duck hunt.

As I look over the duck situation, I find that though the duck hunters in southeast Missouri are adaptable and adequate hunters they are at an extreme disadvantage. Now, I am sure that all duck hunters know what I am talking about, but I'll explain to you other sportsmen who might like to go to bat for another sportsman who just happens to be getting a raw deal.

The present duck season for the state of Missouri ranges from about the last week in October until the first week in December. This season is very satisfactory to the hunters in the northern part of Missouri, but it handicaps the bootheel hunter. As you know, ducks fly south when the weather turns cold. This puts our hunters at an extreme disadvantage, since they can go hunting in their shirt sleeves for most of the existing season.

In 1953 the Sikeston Junior Chamber of Commerce set out to undo this wrong which is set upon us by our own Conservation Commission. When they contacted the Missouri Conservation Commission, all they seem to have gotten was the "run around." Finally in desperation, a three man committee of Bill Vandivort, Doug Crutcher and Joe Fabick went to Washington in an attempt to remedy the situation. After much footwork and a lot of talking they finally found out that there was only one way it could be changed and that was through our own Conservation Commission.

Finally with the help of Mr. Ben Cash of Kennett, who was a representative on the Conservation Commission, the men received a 20 day additional hunting season for the bootheel. Now some 12 years later, we find that things are right back where they started and we now have had our 20 days taken back.

Really, we don't have to much to say in the matter because we have no one from this area on the Conservation Commission Board. However, we do have a proposal. There are several states who have a split season because of the difference in climate throughout the state. (California has a split season.) There is a southern zone for bass fishing in the state of Missouri. All streams and rivers south of the Diversion Channel at Cape Girardeau are on a different season than the rest of the state.

What we suggest is why couldn't that same thing be applied to our duck hunters. It would be much better for us if we were on the same season as Kentucky, Arkansas and Tennessee. We don't want to take the season from our friends to the north. We would just like to get in a little duck hunting ourselves. A split season is the obvious answer that would satisfy all parties involved.

St. Louis Whallops Redlegs 11 to 4, Gagliano Stars

The St. Louis Cardinals looked around after Thursday night's game and wondered, "what's everyone been worrying about."

They had just clobbered the Cincinnati Reds, 11-4, in Cincinnati and obviously did not look like the team that had lost 21 of its last 28 games.

Every thing went right and the Cardinals looked again like World Champions, not a seventh place club, 12 games out of first place.

Kansas City also did not look like a last place team as the A's belted the Yankees, 6-2, as Roland Sheldon whipped his former mates in New York. A three-run homer by Ken Harrelson in the first inning off Mel Stottlemyre was the decisive blow.

Bill White and Phil Gagliano, inserted into the third spot in the batting order, did most of the damage for the Cardinals.

White doubled in the second inning off loser Jim O'Toole, setting up Bob Uecker's two-run single. The Cardinal first baseman doubled home Gagliano in the third and got his third hit, a single in the fifth.

Gagliano hit a three-run homer off reliever Roger Craig to cap a four-run fourth inning. Lou Brock later singled home two runs as the Cardinals slammed 12 hits.

Tracy Stallard gained his fourth victory in six decisions by holding the Reds to six hits--two of them solo homers by Vada Pinson and John Edwards --and four runs in 7 2-3 innings. For a change, the Cardinals got good relief as Don Dennis pitched hitless ball the last 1 1-3 innings.

After Harrelson's homer, the Yankees never caught up. Joe Pepitone hit a solo homer off Sheldon as the Yankees closed within 3-2, but the A's jumped on reliever Pedro Ramos in the eighth for three more runs set up when the Yankee outfield played a fly ball into a double.

The A's travel to Cleveland where Jim Hunter 0-0 of the A's will meet Sam McDowell 8-3 in a night game.

Lewis And Legions Take Victories In Little League

Lewis smashed Lions in the first game last night of the doubleheader 13 to 1 at Puckett Field. Lions managed the same number of hits that Lewis did, but could not stay on base to score.

Lewis came out of the blocks scoring four runs in the first to take the lead and not let Lions score until the third, and then, only one run. In the second, Lewis pumped two runs across on only one hit, and in the third they were scoreless on one hit. When the fourth frame came into action Lewis exploded with four runs and two hits. After Lewis broke the string in the fifth with three runs, the game was called because of the Little League rule. Lions and Lewis each scored in every frame.

Corrigan, with no relief throughout the game, was credited with the win holding Lions to only one run and six hits. Hailey, took the loss for the Lions, giving up 13 runs on six hits.

Morgan and Culbertson led the hitting attack for the losers as they, together, pounded five of the six hits. Schatzley and Vines each had two hits — one a home run by Vines.

Legion took the nightcap as they slipped past their opponents, Jaycee's, with a score of four to three.

Howard led Legion to their winning attack as he gave up only three hits and three runs, and gave the loss to the Jaycee's pitcher, Craig, who also pitched a fine ballgame; however, gave up the same number of hits and only one run more.

In the first inning of the game Legion broke loose scoring four runs — their only four. Jaycee's managed one run in the first to start the score out 4 to 1. Craig held Legion to no more runs throughout the entire ballgame and only one more hit. Legion scored another run in the fourth and one in the sixth to total the runs to three — not enough to take the win over Legion.

Puckett smashed two singles to lead the hitting for Legion. Britt pounded the other in the first inning.

Potlatch had to work, but came out with a close victory over a hard fighting bunch of Bertrand Connie Mackers, 10-7.

Potlatch came to bat in the bottom of the sixth inning with the score knotted at 4 all. In that inning, Sikeston blasted out 5 hits and scored 6 runs, with the help of three base on balls, to lead the Bertrand squad 10 to 4. Bertrand scored 3 runs in the top of the seventh to make the final score 10 to 7.

Potlatch whacked out 8 hits in the contest. McClain and Sherry had two hits a piece to lead the Forester attack. One of Sherry's hits was a second inning double. James, Heath, Owens and Scudder all had one hit each to round out the Sikeston barrage.

Bertrand had 5 hits in the contest. Morrow was the leading hitter for Bertrand, as he rapped a double and a single. Brunderman hit a second inning double for the losers. McConchie also blasted out a double. His blow came in the sixth inning. Richardson had the other hit for Bertrand, it being a single.

Brooks was the losing pitcher for Bertrand. He pitched six and 1/3 innings. He was relieved in the sixth with one man out and three men on by right fielder Sexton.

Stallings picked up the win for the Foresters. He was relieved by Spears in the sixth inning.

Gagliano And Boyer Fined By Cards

After much footwork and a lot of talking they finally found out that there was only one way it could be changed and that was through our own Conservation Commission.

Finally with the help of Mr. Ben Cash of Kennett, who was a representative on the Conservation Commission, the men received a 20 day additional hunting season for the bootheel. Now some 12 years later, we find that things are right back where they started and we now have had our 20 days taken back.

Really, we don't have to much to say in the matter because we have no one from this area on the Conservation Commission Board. However, we do have a proposal. There are several states who have a split season because of the difference in climate throughout the state. (California has a split season.) There is a southern zone for bass fishing in the state of Missouri. All streams and rivers south of the Diversion Channel at Cape Girardeau are on a different season than the rest of the state.

What we suggest is why couldn't that same thing be applied to our duck hunters. It would be much better for us if we were on the same season as Kentucky, Arkansas and Tennessee. We don't want to take the season from our friends to the north. We would just like to get in a little duck hunting ourselves. A split season is the obvious answer that would satisfy all parties involved.

St. Louis Whallops Redlegs 11 to 4, Gagliano Stars

The St. Louis Cardinals looked around after Thursday night's game and wondered, "what's everyone been worrying about."

They had just clobbered the Cincinnati Reds, 11-4, in Cincinnati and obviously did not look like the team that had lost 21 of its last 28 games.

Every thing went right and the Cardinals looked again like World Champions, not a seventh place club, 12 games out of first place.

Kansas City also did not look like a last place team as the A's belted the Yankees, 6-2, as Roland Sheldon whipped his former mates in New York. A three-run homer by Ken Harrelson in the first inning off Mel Settlemyre was the decisive blow.

Bill White and Phil Gagliano, inserted into the third spot in the batting order, did most of the damage for the Cardinals.

White doubled in the second inning off loser Jim O'Toole, setting up Bob Uecker's two-run single. The Cardinal first baseman doubled home Gagliano in the third and got his third hit, a single in the fifth.

Gagliano hit a three-run homer off reliever Roger Craig to cap a four-run fourth inning. Lou Brock later singled home two runs as the Cardinals slammed 12 hits.

Tracy Stallard gained his fourth victory in six decisions by holding the Reds to six hits--two of them solo homers by Vada Pinson and John Edwards --and four runs in 7 2-3 innings. For a change, the Cardinals got good relief as Don Dennis pitched hitless ball the last 1 1-3 innings.

After Harrelson's homer, the Yankees never caught up. Joe Pepitone hit a solo homer off Sheldon as the Yankees closed within 3-2, but the A's jumped on reliever Pedro Ramos in the eighth for three more runs set up when the Yankee outfield played a fly ball into a double.

Lewis And Legions Take Victories In Little League

Lewis smashed Lions in the first game last night of the doubleheader 13 to 1 at Puckett Field. Lions managed the same number of hits that Lewis did, but could not stay on base to score.

Lewis came out of the blocks scoring four runs in the first to take the lead and not let Lions score until the third, and then, only one run. In the second, Lewis pumped two runs across on only one hit, and in the third they were scoreless on one hit. When the fourth frame came into action Lewis exploded with four runs and two hits. After Lewis broke the string in the fifth with three runs, the game was called because of the Little League rule. Lions and Lewis each scored in every frame.

Corrigan, with no relief throughout the game, was credited with the win holding Lions to only one run and six hits. Hailey, took the loss for the Lions, giving up 13 runs on six hits.

Morgan and Culbertson led the hitting attack for the losers as they, together, pounded five of the six hits. Schatzley and Vines each had two hits — one a home run by Vines.

Legion took the nightcap as they slipped past their opponents, Jaycee's, with a score of four to three.

Howard led Legion to their winning attack as he gave up only three hits and three runs, and gave the loss to the Jaycee's pitcher, Craig, who also pitched a fine ballgame; however, gave up the same number of hits and only one run more.

In the first inning of the game Legion broke loose scoring four runs — their only four. Jaycee's managed one run in the first to start the score out 4 to 1. Craig held Legion to no more runs throughout the entire ballgame and only one more hit. Legion scored another run in the fourth and one in the sixth to total the runs to three — not enough to take the win over Legion.

Puckett smashed two singles to lead the hitting for Legion. Britt pounded the other in the first inning.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: As the father of three children I thought I knew a lot about life, but I still learn something every day. Last night I took the family to a drive-in movie and I learned plenty.

The feature hadn't been on five minutes when a young girl in the next car squealed, "Stop that." About 10 seconds later she yelled, "If you don't leave me alone I'm going to sock you." Then a boy's voice said, "Oh c'mon, don't be so touchy." I looked in their direction and saw an attractive young girl who couldn't have been more than 15 years old. Her boy friend appeared to be about 17.

At that moment another female voice in another car warned, "If you don't cut that out I'm going to get out and walk home." The boy seated next to her answered angrily, "You don't think I brought you here to look at this crummy movie, do you?"

At that point my wife whispered, "Let's go home. There's no telling what will be said next and I don't want to have to explain to the children."

Please, Ann Landers, come right out and tell teen-age girls the facts of life so they will know how to deal with boys who are out to get all they can.--A FATHER

Dear Dad: You must be a new reader. I've been telling them for ten years. And my recent boo, "Teen-agers and Sex" has offered another round of ammunition. A girl in Little Rock wrote, "Your book came in very handy. I took it along on a date last Friday. When my boy friend got fresh, I hit him with it."

Dear Ann Landers: In view of the recent letter concerning a daughter who refused to finance her younger sister's college education I'd like to recite my experience.

I put two relatives through college. They both promised to pay me back out of their first earnings. My niece wanted so desperately to be a teacher that she offered to pay me 10% interest on the loan. I refused the interest and told her I'd settle for the principle.

Two years have passed since she got her degree and my niece now has an excellent job in a fine school. She has not mentioned one word about repaying the money she owes me. Last Christmas I received no card from her.

The other relative has a fine position in the electronics field. I have not heard from him since his graduation last year. When I saw him at a family affair recently he gave me a nervous hello and avoided me for the balance of the evening.

Can self-respecting people put obligations out of their minds and pretend they don't exist? Are all people who borrow money like this or did I draw a couple of lemons?--TAKEN

Dear Taken: All people are NOT like that. Some people mean it when they say they will repay a loan.

Rather than just hand over money to a friend or relative I recommend this: Offer to be a co-signer at the bank. The borrower will then owe the bank, not you. If he fails to meet the payments he will receive crisp and impersonal reminders.

Of course if he goes sour at the bank, as the co-signer you must pay the loan. However, your chances for getting stuck are slight since most people will stick a friend or a relative before they will go sour at a bank.

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SHAPE OF THE CROSS
That we be forgiven,
Let us each forgive.
Now in peace together
Let us try to live
May the heavy stone be
Rolled far away
May His spirit abide
With us this day.
When the sun rises
On next Easter morn,
May true faith anew
In hearts be born.

What's New With Maadam Nhu

Editor's Note -- Two years ago the delicate if sharp -- tongued First Lady of Viet Nam was on the world's center stage. What has become of Madame Nhu? She is in self-imposed exile in Rome, but some say she still has visions of a triumphant return to the land of her late husband.

"Madame Nhu?" said a farmer who lives nearby. "I've never heard the name before, but I've been told there is somebody from Viet Nam around here."

Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu, the once-powerful First Lady of Viet Nam, lives in seclusion in the unpretentious villa. Two years ago she toured the United States talking to as many audiences as she could gather for as long as they would listen. Now she sees no one. The few Italians who have met her say she believes she will return to Saigon one day, the policies of her husband and brother-in-law vindicated.

Mme. Nhu was in the United States during the coup that brought violent death to her husband, Ngo Dinh Nhu, the head of Viet Nam's secret police, and to her brother-in-law, President Ngo Dinh Diem.

It was her contention then that whatever faults the government had-though she would admit to precious few-it was better than any alternative before the Vietnamese people.

She left the United States and moved to Paris, and occasionally she visited Rome. Later she moved to the relatively modest villa where she now lives.

The community is a pastoral area of green farms about 15 miles southwest of Rome, not far from the seaside resort of Ostia Beach.

Apparently Mme. Nhu does not lack money. A villager who occasionally has worked inside her villa says she has a household staff of two maids, a cook, a part-time gardener, a secretary and a French nurse-tutor for her two younger children.

These two-Quynh, 13, a boy, and Le Quyen, 6, a girl-live in the villa and seldom leave it. Mme. Nhu's older children-Le Thuy, 20, a daughter, and Trace, 17, a son-are staying in Paris, according to the Italian national police.

Mme. Nhu herself is reported to spend almost all her time in her study in the villa, working on her memoirs and occasional statements that she mails to newspapers.

Mme. Nhu apparently avoids official contacts. Sources at the South Vietnamese Embassy in Rome say they have never seen her.

Grocers in the area say they have not received a single order from the villa.

"They seem to buy everything in Rome or some place else," said a baker. "We do not even see her at church. The local priest told us she is Roman Catholic, but we never see her at Sunday Mass."

Please, Ann Landers, come right out and tell teen-age girls the facts of life so they will know how to deal with boys who are out to get all they can.--A FATHER

Dear Dad: You must be a new reader. I've been telling them for ten years. And my recent boo, "Teen-agers and Sex" has offered another round of ammunition. A girl in Little Rock wrote, "Your book came in very handy. I took it along on a date last Friday. When my boy friend got fresh, I hit him with it."

Dear Ann Landers: In view of the recent letter concerning a daughter who refused to finance her younger sister's college education I'd like to recite my experience.

I put two relatives through college. They both promised to pay me back out of their first earnings. My niece wanted so desperately to be a teacher that she offered to pay me 10% interest on the loan. I refused the interest and told her I'd settle for the principle.

Two years have passed since she got her degree and my niece now has an excellent job in a fine school. She has not mentioned one word about repaying the money she owes me. Last Christmas I received no card from her.

The other relative has a fine position in the electronics field. I have not heard from him since his graduation last year. When I saw him at a family affair recently he gave me a nervous hello and avoided me for the balance of the evening.

Can self-respecting people put obligations out of their minds and pretend they don't exist? Are all people who borrow money like this or did I draw a couple of lemons?--TAKEN

Dear Taken: All people are NOT like that. Some people mean it when they say they will repay a loan.

Rather than just hand over money to a friend or relative I recommend this: Offer to be a co-signer at the bank. The borrower will then owe the bank, not you. If he fails to meet the payments he will receive crisp and impersonal reminders.

Of course if he goes sour at the bank, as the co-signer you must pay the loan. However, your chances for getting stuck are slight since most people will stick a friend or a relative before they will go sour at a bank.

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SHAPE OF THE CROSS
That we be forgiven,
Let us each forgive.
Now in peace together
Let us try to live
May the heavy stone be
Rolled far away
May His spirit abide
With us this day.
When the sun rises
On next Easter morn,
May true faith anew
In hearts be born.

What's New With Maadam Nhu

Editor's Note -- Two years ago the delicate if sharp -- tongued First Lady of Viet Nam was on the world's center stage. What has become of Madame Nhu? She is in self-imposed exile in Rome, but some say she still has visions of a triumphant return to the land of her late husband.

"Madame Nhu?" said a farmer who lives nearby. "I've never heard the name before, but I've been told there is somebody from Viet Nam around here."

Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu, the once-powerful First Lady of Viet Nam, lives in seclusion in the unpretentious villa. Two years ago she toured the United States talking to as many audiences as she could gather for as long as they would listen. Now she sees no one. The few Italians who have met her say she believes she will return to Saigon one day, the policies of her husband and brother-in-law vindicated.

Mme. Nhu was in the United States during the coup that brought violent death to her husband, Ngo Dinh Nhu, the head of Viet Nam's secret police, and to her brother-in-law, President Ngo Dinh Diem.

It was her contention then that whatever faults the government had-though she would admit to precious few-it was better than any alternative before the Vietnamese people.

She left the United States and moved to Paris, and occasionally she visited Rome. Later she moved to the relatively modest villa where she now lives.

The community is a pastoral area of green farms about 15 miles southwest of Rome, not far from the seaside resort of Ostia Beach.

Apparently Mme. Nhu does not lack money. A villager who occasionally has worked inside her villa says she has a household staff of two maids, a cook, a part-time gardener, a secretary and a French nurse-tutor for her two younger children.

These two-Quynh, 13, a boy, and Le Quyen, 6, a girl-live in the villa and seldom leave it. Mme. Nhu's older children-Le Thuy, 20, a daughter, and Trace, 17, a son-are staying in Paris, according to the Italian national police.

Mme. Nhu herself is reported to spend almost all her time in her study in the villa, working on her memoirs and occasional statements that she mails to newspapers.

Mme. Nhu apparently avoids official contacts. Sources at the South Vietnamese Embassy in Rome say they have never seen her.

Grocers in the area say they have not received a single order from the villa.

"They seem to buy everything in Rome or some place else," said a baker. "We do not even see her at church. The local priest told us she is Roman Catholic, but we never see her at Sunday Mass."

Allen Wade Haugsted

Baker Joins FBI List

WASHINGTON -- Allen Wade Haugsted, a hot-tempered Minnesota baker, charged with a deadly family crime rampage, has been added to the FBI's list of Ten Most Wanted Fugitives.

On the night of Feb. 19, Haugsted allegedly invaded his mother-in-law's home near Willmar, Minn., shot his estranged wife in the chest and head, killing her, and killed his mother-in-law with three more gunshots, in addition to severely clubbing her on the head. Haugsted also allegedly shot his seven-year-old daughter in the head, seriously wounding her, and inflicted a superficial gunshot wound on his brother-in-law. This violence occurred three days after divorce papers were served on Haugsted and two days after he allegedly purchased a .22 caliber automatic pistol at a Willmar store.

Upon indications that Haugsted had fled interstate, a federal warrant was issued at Minneapolis, March 3, charging him with unlawful interstate flight to avoid prosecution for murder.

Haugsted has also worked as a cook, handyman, janitor and motion picture projectionist. He has a lengthy juvenile arrest record for thefts and, in 1950, after conviction for grand larceny, he was sent to the Minnesota state reformatory for a 17-month term.

Born at Minneapolis, Jan. 13, 1931, he is 5' 10" tall, weighs 200 pounds, has a heavy build, medium complexion, brown hair and blue eyes. He has a small scar at the back of his head above the neckline, reportedly wears dentures and walks at a quick, nervous pace with his toes pointed outwards.

Haugsted is known as an avid outdoorsman and camper and a skilled cabinet maker. He is said to enjoy television and radio newscasts, as well as movies and TV detective and cowboy programs. He also reportedly likes to read detective stories and explore abandoned mines. Known as a meticulous and neat dresser, he reportedly prefers sport clothes. Said to be normally a reserved loner, with no close friends, Haugsted has a reputation for being accident prone and quick to submit an injury claim.

He has reportedly smoked cigarettes heavily in the past, is said to occasionally drink beer and to be particularly fond of fruit juices and ice cream, especially malted milks.

He is considered to be extremely dangerous.

Persons receiving any information concerning the whereabouts of Haugsted are requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be located on the first page of local telephone directories.

FINDING THE WAY

'Happy Fourth of July'

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

No one has ever wished me a "Happy Fourth of July." There would be sense in the greeting for this is the birthday of a nation which insists that the pursuit of happiness is an inalienable right of the human being.

The trilogy of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" is heresy in a totalitarian state.

What is the version of happiness America offers to mankind on this anniversary of its founding?

The pursuit of happiness is dependent upon the pursuit of righteousness. In the end, happiness is a profoundly moral problem. The happy persons on July 4th are not those who are doing just what comes naturally. Happiness is not just tickling the fancy. Happiness is the by-product of vocation.

The happiest people are those who have strengthened their country because they have acted in response to their fundamental faith in God's love and concern.

They live in a country which protects this freedom to respond. Thus, it is no slip of the tongue to assert that the inalienable rights of man are life, liberty and the pursuit of righteousness.

There's always the difference between seeking after righteousness and preening ourselves with self-righteousness. We Americans have been humiliated and are not feeling very self-righteous. We live in a world which questions us about our vaunted freedoms and asks us whether we really mean what we say we mean.

Yet America's strength is in recognition that while we have many tough and unsolved problems, we also believe that they can be solved. We act in the arena of responsible freedom.

There is an old story about a boy who was flying a kite beyond his line of vision. He was asked how he knew that there was a kite on the string. "Oh", said the boy, "I can tell by the pull of it."

Pursuing righteousness is believing that there is a moral law, and even when the possibilities are outside of one's vision, still feeling the pull of it. This is the quality of character which protects and preserves freedom.

It is this goodness which is the rootage for the tree called happiness. On this important national holiday we pledge our faith that man has these inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of righteousness. Therein is his happiness.

Let me wish you "A Happy Fourth of July."

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK — While Washington frets about American tourists spending Yankee dollars abroad, one industry confidently predicts it will be pulling back more of these dollars this year than ever.

The motion picture industry says it gets 55 per cent of its gross income from showing its flickers abroad. And it claims this is a higher percentage than can be boasted by any other large American industry.

This year it expects to bring back $10 million more than last year's $260 million.

Movie makers also insist that they inspire demand throughout the world for American products and thus help boost U.S. exports of goods. This is the nation's biggest source of dollars when it tries to balance its international monetary payments. And Washington is beating the bushes to get American businessmen to try to sell more abroad.

The American products that movies popularize run all the way from blue jeans in Algiers to electric guitars in Stockholm, from gocarts in Bern, Switzerland, to home furnishings in Caracas, Venezuela.

Movie makers also take credit for stimulating interest of foreigners in visiting the United States. They can't prove it, but they feel sure that pictures of American scenes and particularly of American ways of life make Europeans curious to see for themselves.

With an eye on gleaning still more dollars abroad, the Motion Picture Export Association of America is urging the government to get its foreign service to put more emphasis on stimulating such trade. It says its return flow of dollars would be increased if Washington could get some nations with blocked funds to ease their restrictions, and others to lower discriminatory trade barriers.

Such barriers also work against the buying of American goods that foreigners see and admire in movies. A survey of U.S. consular posts shows that this is the case in such places as Pakistan, Egypt, Brazil, Israel and the countries behind the Iron Curtain.

But in many lands American movies have inspired consumer demands that local manufacturers have been inspired to satisfy. Consulates note this affect in Baghdad and Buenos Aires, in Madrid and Cairo.

Sweden reports its younger set goes heavily for pop records, sportswear, cosmetics and auto decorations such as are featured in the American flickers. The older set is influenced by appliances and home interiors.

Pursuit Of Excellence Marked Selnick Career

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD — The pursuit of excellence marked the film-making career of David O. Selznick, and "Gone With The Wind" remains as monumental evidence of how well he achieved his purpose.

Though first released a quarter-century ago when theater admissions were half what they are today, "Gone With The Wind" is still the top money-making film of all time. Its evergreen quality is such that MGM can re-release it every three years and collect another $5 million in rentals.

Most of the great Selznick films had the same timeless quality. Each was hand-fashioned by months of meticulous planning, mountains of memos and dogged attention to every aspect of filming.

The result was a panorama of screen achievements. His films at RKO helped put the studio in the bigtime: "A Bill of Divorcement," which introduced Katharine Hepburn; "King Kong," still the best of the science fiction thrillers; "Of Human Bondage," which established Bette Davis as a dramatic star.

Moving to MGM, he put his personal stamp on such films as "David Copperfield," "A Tale of Two Cities," "Dinner at Eight," "Anna Karenina" and "Viva Villa."

Selznick wearied of the big-studio operation. "It is impossible for 40 or 50 productions to go through one man's hands and emerge with any degree of quality," he reasoned. And so he began the independent course that continued until his death this week of a heart attack.

His success as an independent was dazzling. He produced the best film ever made about Hollywood, "A Star Is Born"; a great wacky comedy with Carole Lombard and Fredric March, "Nothing Sacred"; a fine swashbuckling romance with Ronald Colman, "The Prisoner of Zenda." All were subsequently remade by other producers with scant success.

And then, "Gone With The Wind."

6. City Bond Issue

Chamber of Commerce Board Endorses Proposal

Editor's Note: This is the sixth of a series of articles prepared by the board of public works to explain its plan to improve the city's water and sewage system. Voters will be asked to approve the proposal in a bond election.

Whereas, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce has carefully studied the plan for improving the city's water and sewer systems; and

Whereas, these improvements are necessary to meet the needs of a growing community; and

Whereas, these improvements will give the citizens of Sikeston better service, more effective fire protection, and decreased pollution; and

Whereas, these improvements will help to stabilize the cost of fire insurance; and

Whereas, these improvements are vitally important for continued commercial and residential growth and progress; and

Whereas, these improvements will help attract new industry to Sikeston;

Therefore, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors does hereby endorse and sponsor these proposed improvements and urges all citizens to vote on July -, 1965, in favor of the bond issue which will make them possible.

One result of the $1,200,000 plan to improve Sikeston's water and sewer systems --if this plan is approved by the voters -- will be the stabilization of fire insurance costs.

According to the city insurance committee, which advises the city on such matters, unless the water storage and distribution systems are expanded in capacity, there is a possibility that Sikeston might lose its status as a class-eight city and, for fire insurance purposes, be re-classified as class-nine. This would have the effect of raising fire insurance rates.

The city insurance committee reports that there is no immediate rate increase in sight, but that the possibility becomes more likely as community growth further strains the city's water system.

The Missouri Inspection Bureau, which makes fire insurance classifications, has pointed out in a letter to the board of public works that the distribution and storage facilities of the municipal water works are rapidly becoming inadequate and are in need of improvement.

Sikeston's continuing growth in population creates increased commercial, industrial, and residential water demands, which reduce the fire control effectiveness of the municipal water system. As the effectiveness of fire control decreases, fire insurance rates tend to increase.

The plan to improve the city's water and sewer system will expand the capacity of the city's water storage and water distribution facilities, and will give Sikeston better fire protection.

This improved fire protection, in turn, will reduce the chance of any increase in the cost of fire insurance to the citizens of Sikeston.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why is March 17 celebrated as Saint Patrick's Day?

A—March 17 is the traditional day on which Saint Patrick died. It is his feast day, not his birthday. To the early Christians the day of death represented the beginning of eternal peace and glory.

Western Samoans call their huge longboats "fautasi". These superb sailors evolved their racing craft from whale boats and skim them across the water propelled by 40 or more oarsmen, while the coxswain beats out the tempo on a tin can.

What is the version of happiness America offers to mankind on this anniversary of its founding?

The pursuit of happiness is dependent upon the pursuit of righteousness. In the end, happiness is a profoundly moral problem. The happy persons on July 4th are not those who are doing just what comes naturally. Happiness is not just tickling the fancy. Happiness is the by-product of vocation.

The happiest people are those who have strengthened their country because they have acted in response to their fundamental faith in God's love and concern.

They live in a country which protects this freedom to respond. Thus, it is no slip of the tongue to assert that the inalienable rights of man are life, liberty and the pursuit of righteousness.

There's always the difference between seeking after righteousness and preening ourselves with self-righteousness. We Americans have been humiliated and are not feeling very self-righteous. We live in a world which questions us about our vaunted freedoms and asks us whether we really mean what we say we mean.

Yet America's strength is in recognition that while we have many tough and unsolved problems, we also believe that they can be solved. We act in the arena of responsible freedom.

There is an old story about a boy who was flying a kite beyond his line of vision. He was asked how he knew that there was a kite on the string. "Oh", said the boy, "I can tell by the pull of it."

Pursuing righteousness is believing that there is a moral law, and even when the possibilities are outside of one's vision, still feeling the pull of it. This is the quality of character which protects and preserves freedom.

It is this goodness which is the rootage for the tree called happiness. On this important national holiday we pledge our faith that man has these inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of righteousness. Therein is his happiness.

Let me wish you "A Happy Fourth of July."

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK — While Washington frets about American tourists spending Yankee dollars abroad, one industry confidently predicts it will be pulling back more of these dollars this year than ever.

The motion picture industry says it gets 55 per cent of its gross income from showing its flickers abroad. And it claims this is a higher percentage than can be boasted by any other large American industry.

This year it expects to bring back $10 million more than last year's $260 million.

Movie makers also insist that they inspire demand throughout the world for American products and thus help boost U.S. exports of goods. This is the nation's biggest source of dollars when it tries to balance its international monetary payments. And Washington is beating the bushes to get American businessmen to try to sell more abroad.

The American products that movies popularize run all the way from blue jeans in Algiers to electric guitars in Stockholm, from gocarts in Bern, Switzerland, to home furnishings in Caracas, Venezuela.

Movie makers also take credit for stimulating interest of foreigners in visiting the United States. They can't prove it, but they feel sure that pictures of American scenes and particularly of American ways of life make Europeans curious to see for themselves.

With an eye on gleaning still more dollars abroad, the Motion Picture Export Association of America is urging the government to get its foreign service to put more emphasis on stimulating such trade. It says its return flow of dollars would be increased if Washington could get some nations with blocked funds to ease their restrictions, and others to lower discriminatory trade barriers.

Such barriers also work against the buying of American goods that foreigners see and admire in movies. A survey of U.S. consular posts shows that this is the case in such places as Pakistan, Egypt, Brazil, Israel and the countries behind the Iron Curtain.

But in many lands American movies have inspired consumer demands that local manufacturers have been inspired to satisfy. Consulates note this affect in Baghdad and Buenos Aires, in Madrid and Cairo.

Sweden reports its younger set goes heavily for pop records, sportswear, cosmetics and auto decorations such as are featured in the American flickers. The older set is influenced by appliances and home interiors.

Pursuit Of Excellence Marked Selnick Career

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD — The pursuit of excellence marked the filmmaking career of David O. Selznick, and "Gone With The Wind" remains as monumental evidence of how well he achieved his purpose.

Though first released a quarter-century ago when theater admissions were half what they are today, "Gone With The Wind" is still the top money-making film of all time. Its evergreen quality is such that MGM can re-release it every three years and collect another $5 million in rentals.

Most of the great Selznick films had the same timeless quality. Each was hand-fashioned by months of meticulous planning, mountains of memos and dogged attention to every aspect of filming.

The result was a panorama of screen achievements. His films at RKO helped put the studio in the bigtime: "A Bill of Divorcement," which introduced Katharine Hepburn; "King Kong," still the best of the science fiction thrillers; "Of Human Bondage," which established Bette Davis as a dramatic star.

Moving to MGM, he put his personal stamp on such films as "David Copperfield," "A Tale of Two Cities," "Dinner at Eight," "Anna Karenina" and "Viva Villa."

Selznick wearied of the big-studio operation. "It is impossible for 40 or 50 productions to go through one man's hands and emerge with any degree of quality," he reasoned. And so he began the independent course that continued until his death this week of a heart attack.

His success as an independent was dazzling. He produced the best film ever made about Hollywood, "A Star Is Born"; a great wacky comedy with Carole Lombard and Fredric March, "Nothing Sacred"; a fine swashbuckling romance with Ronald Colman, "The Prisoner of Zenda." All were subsequently remade by other producers with scant success.

And then, "Gone With The Wind."

6. City Bond Issue

Chamber of Commerce Board Endorses Proposal

Editor's Note: This is the sixth of a series of articles prepared by the board of public works to explain its plan to improve the city's water and sewage system. Voters will be asked to approve the proposal in a bond election.

Whereas, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce has carefully studied the plan for improving the city's water and sewer systems; and

Whereas, these improvements are necessary to meet the needs of a growing community; and

Whereas, these improvements will give the citizens of Sikeston better service, more effective fire protection, and decreased pollution; and

Whereas, these improvements will help to stabilize the cost of fire insurance; and

Whereas, these improvements are vitally important for continued commercial and residential growth and progress; and

Whereas, these improvements will help attract new industry to Sikeston;

Therefore, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors does hereby endorse and sponsor these proposed improvements and urges all citizens to vote on July -, 1965, in favor of the bond issue which will make them possible.

One result of the $1,200,000 plan to improve Sikeston's water and sewer systems --if this plan is approved by the voters -- will be the stabilization of fire insurance costs.

According to the city insurance committee, which advises the city on such matters, unless the water storage and distribution systems are expanded in capacity, there is a possibility that Sikeston might lose its status as a class-eight city and, for fire insurance purposes, be re-classified as class-nine. This would have the effect of raising fire insurance rates.

The city insurance committee reports that there is no immediate rate increase in sight, but that the possibility becomes more likely as community growth further strains the city's water system.

The Missouri Inspection Bureau, which makes fire insurance classifications, has pointed out in a letter to the board of public works that the distribution and storage facilities of the municipal water works are rapidly becoming inadequate and are in need of improvement.

Sikeston's continuing growth in population creates increased commercial, industrial, and residential water demands, which reduce the fire control effectiveness of the municipal water system. As the effectiveness of fire control decreases, fire insurance rates tend to increase.

The plan to improve the city's water and sewer system will expand the capacity of the city's water storage and water distribution facilities, and will give Sikeston better fire protection. This improved fire protection, in turn, will reduce the chance of any increase in the cost of fire insurance to the citizens of Sikeston.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Why is March 17 celebrated as Saint Patrick's Day?

A—March 17 is the traditional day on which Saint Patrick died. It is his feast day, not his birthday. To the early Christians the day of death represented the beginning of eternal peace and glory.

"Fautasi" Boats

Latest Beats On Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A most unusual, experimental program aimed at a minority audience will occupy 90 minutes of CBS' expensive prime time Monday night.

From 9:30 to 11 p.m. (EDT) viewers will be regaled with the latest in beat music by more than 20 top singing acts beloved by the younger crowd. In between numbers there will be non-commercial commercials--in a language which older viewers may find difficult to understand.

The show is "It's What's Happening, Baby!" a public service "swingin' soiree" on behalf of the federal Office of Economic Opportunity. The special audience is youngsters between 16 and 21 who are thinking about quitting — or already have quit — high school before graduating.

Host and message-giver is a disc jockey named Murray Kaufman, 38, but always called "Murray the K" by his young fans. Murray is peculiarly qualified, for he was himself a high school drop-out, has an enormous youthful following, and speaks (and invented) a lot of the slangy hip talk that is almost a secret language of the kids.

"The OEO looked around and found that I was able to reach them," Murray explained during a rehearsal break. "When they first came to me with an idea, I thought they were trying to intellectualize the problem and said that I could perhaps present the idea another way. The special is my idea.

"As a drop-out myself, I've been there and I know what those kids on the streets of New York or in the hills of West Virginia or any place are thinking about. I couldn't care less about the nice little girls from Scarsdale or Shaker Heights — it's boys mostly. And the rapport will be mostly that it's what's happening."

Murray, CBS and the musical performers (who range from Herman's Hermits to the Cannibal and the Headhunters) are contributing their services.

Wright Touch Intact At Taliesen

Today the Taliesin Fellowship is filled with new students. Taliesin associated architects are working on some 50 projects totaling more than $32 million.

And the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation, which includes two schools, Taliesin West near Scottsdale, Ariz., and Taliesin East at Spring Green, Wis., is in the black after a brush with bankruptcy from an $800,000 back-taxes bite.

The atmosphere of Taliesin has changed only subtlely since his death. There's a bookkeeper and lawyer now—Wright stubbornly ignored the existence of money. The canvas roofs have been replaced with wood; a new theater has been built from one of Wright's sketches.

Students, who come from all over the world to study, work amidst drawings and sketches of "the master," learn engineering, philosophy and concept directly from Wright himself—most of his lectures and Sunday-morning conversations with famous guests were recorded. They still share communal chores of housekeeping, cooking and serving meals, building and gardening.

Guiding this effort is Wright's widow, Olgivanna, soft-voiced artist author, composer who became his third wife in 1926 and helped him found the fellowship in 1932.

She presides with an air of fragile grace over drawing-room conversations with the ever-present guests.

Her face, framed by thin silver braids against jet hair, is intently reposed as she listens to musicals, or watches pageants or dances staged by the students and their wives, which she and her daughter, Iovanna, have written, composed, choreographed, directed and costumed.

The only hint of steel and authority is in her black eyes and her regal expectance of perfection in every detail around her.

Yet every sketch or plan that leaves Taliesin is passed by her; she dictates color schemes, chooses interior and exterior materials of the smallest home or biggest building.

She is intricately involved with the corps of some 35 Taliesin-trained architects, many of whom have been with the fellowship for a quarter of a century, working now under the direction of Wright's son-in-law, William Wesley Peters.

She does all this, she said in an interview here, through the "eyes," he gave her.

"Mr. Wright left us debts; but he left us the means to pay them. He left us a heritage of beauty. Our eyes were hardly ever separated through our 32 years together. We traveled, worked, lived always together. I was his critic, and often a suggestion would light a spark. "He left me a pretty good measuring stick. 'Mother,' he would say to me, 'beauty is the highest expression of morality. Never compromise on beauty.'"

Born in Montenegro, educated in Russia, her "university" was a Paris cafe kitchen. As she washed dishes she learned 50 English words a day, pinned up on the wall before her. During the early years of Taliesin she scrubbed floors.

Taliesin, a Welsh word meaning "shining brow," began with the Wrights and a small group of students who lived in tents and cooked outside on the desert.

It continues today, six years after his death, much more comfortably both physically and financially, with the same spirit with which it began.

Johnson Grass Sprayed In Sikeston Areas

By Councilman Harry E. Dudley

Recently the Scott County weed control truck manned by E. J. Cook and Jim Davis has been in our city. These County employees were spraying Johnson Grass trying to control it on City streets, alleys and road ditches. They cannot spray Johnson Grass on private property, and it is almost impossible to control this pest unless the owners of infested lots take action of their own to control it. It is very probable that some patches of the grass were missed by the spray crew, and if you see any in the streets, alleys or ditches please call GR 1-2173 giving us the location and on the next trip down here they will try to spray these areas.

In driving around Sikeston, we were impressed with her beautiful residential homes, well-kept lawns, and brilliant blooming shrubs and trees. Strong and deep rooted in all of us is pride of possession. It is as old as the evening star, the home is our first point of interest, our dearest possession and our hometown should be a close "second." We are all proud of Sikeston, and its steady growth within a period of years. The business sections, our churches, newspapers, radio station, schools, and library, her parks, Little League parks, Babe Ruth, Connie Mack Leagues and places of entertainment are a vital part of Sikeston.

Each of us has a job to do in our hometown. If it's worth living in, it is worth boosting and supporting. It takes loyalty, cooperation, and unselfish interest to make a community like Sikeston thrive and grow. A spirit of pride and cooperation should make us eager to work wholeheartedly, hand in hand, in support of such business and social citizenship as is evidenced in Sikeston.

Sikeston is a beautiful city. If you don't believe it, just take time out from your busy schedule and drive around and see for yourself.

City Manager Miller informs us that it will be possible for city crews to again remove diseased, dying and dead trees and stumps where readily accessible from yards and streets. This work will be done in the fall or during inelement weather, so please make your requests known by writing or calling the City Administrative Building, phone GR 1-2173 as this will be a first come first service project. Also, requests for sidewalk construction and reconstruction are being received.

A real estate salesman spent all day Sunday showing a couple through model homes. "And here," he wearily said at the tenth home he had shown, "is the hobby room. Do any of you folks have hobbies?"

"Yes," replied the woman, "Looking through model homes on Sundays."

"Mr. Wright left us debts; but he left us the means to pay them. He left us a heritage of beauty. Our eyes were hardly ever separated through our 32 years together. We traveled, worked, lived always together. I was his critic, and often a suggestion would light a spark.

"He left me a pretty good measuring stick. 'Mother,' he would say to me, 'beauty is the highest expression of morality. Never compromise on beauty.' "

Born in Montenegro, educated in Russia, her "university" was a Paris cafe kitchen. As she washed dishes she learned 50 English words a day, pinned up on the wall before her. During the early years of Taliesin she scrubbed floors.

Taliesin, a Welsh word meaning "shining brow," began with the Wrights and a small group of students who lived in tents and cooked outside on the desert.

It continues today, six years after his death, much more comfortably both physically and financially, with the same spirit with which it began.

Johnson Grass Sprayed In Sikeston Areas

By Councilman Harry E. Dudley

Recently the Scott County weed control truck manned by E. J. Cook and Jim Davis has been in our city. These County employees were spraying Johnson Grass trying to control it on City streets, alleys and road ditches. They cannot spray Johnson Grass on private property, and it is almost impossible to control this pest unless the owners of infested lots take action of their own to control it. It is very probable that some patches of the grass were missed by the spray crew, and if you see any in the streets, alleys or ditches please call GR 1-2173 giving us the location and on the next trip down here they will try to spray these areas.

In driving around Sikeston, we were impressed with her beautiful residential homes, well-kept lawns, and brilliant blooming shrubs and trees. Strong and deep rooted in all of us is pride of possession. It is as old as the evening star, the home is our first point of interest, our dearest possession and our hometown should be a close "second." We are all proud of Sikeston, and its steady growth within a period of years. The business sections, our churches, newspapers, radio station, schools, and library, her parks, Little League parks, Babe Ruth, Connie Mack Leagues and places of entertainment are a vital part of Sikeston.

Each of us has a job to do in our hometown. If it's worth living in, it is worth boosting and supporting. It takes loyalty, cooperation, and unselfish interest to make a community like Sikeston thrive and grow. A spirit of pride and cooperation should make us eager to work wholeheartedly, hand in hand, in support of such business and social citizenship as is evidenced in Sikeston.

Sikeston is a beautiful city. If you don't believe it, just take time out from your busy schedule and drive around and see for yourself.

City Manager Miller informs us that it will be possible for city crews to again remove diseased, dying and dead trees and stumps where readily accessible from yards and streets. This work will be done in the fall or during inelement weather, so please make your requests known by writing or calling the City Administrative Building, phone GR 1-2173 as this will be a first come first service project. Also, requests for sidewalk construction and reconstruction are being received.

WHICH TAKES PRECEDENCE?
I wouldn't meet'em
If I had my "ruther."
With a paper cup in one hand
And a steering wheel in their other.

A real estate salesman spent all day Sunday showing a couple through model homes. "And here," he wearily said at the tenth home he had shown, "is the hobby room. Do any of you folks have hobbies?"

"Yes," replied the woman, "Looking through model homes on Sundays."

Keeping Down Clutter

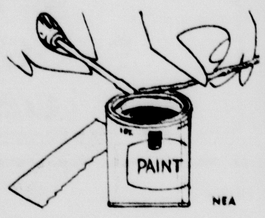
Polly

DEAR POLLY—Each time my child receives a new toy she must part with an old one which she can choose. This keeps the clutter down and teaches her she must give to receive.—LINDA

DEAR POLLY—I have found a good use for all the plastic coffee can lids I have saved. I will make a fence from them for my flower bed. Stand them around the bed with half the round top under the ground and half sticking up above the ground. If you prefer, the part above the ground can be painted green or some other color.—SYLVIA



DEAR POLLY—When painting from the paint can or even pouring paint into a roller tray, I tear a piece of cleansing tissue in half, twist it and tuck it around the lip of the can. This absorbs the paint that ordinarily runs into the lip around the top of the can. When the painting is finished just pull the tissue out and there is not a lot of residue to clean up. The top fits tightly again and a lot of time and "clean up" has been saved. A full tissue is too heavy to tuck in properly but one half of one will fit almost around the entire top of a quart can.

Many of us like to stand platters and so on against the backs of cupboard shelves but have no plate grooves in which to place them. I take a pipe cleaner, twist each end into a small loop that a thumb-tack will hold firmly to the shelf and place it so the strip is in the desired place on a shelf to keep the dish from slipping down. This has the additional advantage of being easy to remove at house cleaning time, can be placed on top of shelf paper at the proper distance from the wall to hold a particular piece and saves shelf space as well as broken dishes.—MRS. G. B.

DEAR POLLY — Knowing that my boys' shirts with long sleeves and long inside tails will probably be too small next winter, I am converting them into new style summer shirts. Simply cut off the sleeves to come above the elbows, allowing for 1½-inch hems. Snip off the tail allowing for a 2¼-inch hem that is to be turned up to give the appearance of a 2-inch band at the bottom. Add a buttonhole and button in the center front of the band. Next pleat over on the side seams to take up the excess width and sew down with two matching buttons for each side of this band. For the cost of 15 minutes, a bit of thread and five buttons I have the latest style shirt from what would likely be a discarded one next fall.—SHARLENE

GIRLS—I am so sorry but it is impossible for us to answer the many requests for "repeats" of previous hints. Do try to clip and save any that interest you.—POLLY

Lilbourn Rodeo Next Week

LILBOURN -- The Arrowhead Saddle club's fifth annual rodeo and barbecue is scheduled to be held next Friday and Saturday. Site for this year's event will again be the Saddle club arena at the west end of Lewis avenue.

Top cowboys are again expected to compete for cash prizes in bareback riding, brahma bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, barrel racing, and events limited to Saddle club entries.

Friday rodeo time has been set at 8 p.m. Time for the second day's performance is 4 p.m.

In the interest of all the countries of this hemisphere, including of course Canada, a common market is long overdue and should be negotiated now.

Within this framework, Latin America might at last achieve its dream of stable prices for its raw materials and industrial development; Canada might achieve its hope for greater population; and the United States as the hub would certainly achieve what is vitally important to it -- a financially healthy, cooperative hemisphere capable of standing on its own feet.

Lilbourn Rodeo Next Week

LILBOURN -- The Arrowhead Saddle club's fifth annual rodeo and barbecue is scheduled to be held next Friday and Saturday. Site for this year's event will again be the Saddle club arena at the west end of Lewis avenue.

Top cowboys are again expected to compete for cash prizes in bareback riding, brahma bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, barrel racing, and events limited to Saddle club entries.

Friday rodeo time has been set at 8 p.m. Time for the second day's performance is 4 p.m.

In the interest of all the countries of this hemisphere, including of course Canada, a common market is long overdue and should be negotiated now. Within this framework, Latin America might at last achieve its dream of stable prices for its raw materials and industrial development; Canada might achieve its hope for greater population; and the United States as the hub would certainly achieve what is vitally important to it -- a financially healthy, cooperative hemisphere capable of standing on its own feet.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. (I John 4:9)

PRAYER: Thou art loving indeed, Lord. Grant me Thy love, its warmth and self-renewing power and force to love others and to live the best for Thee, as I do my work every day. In the name of the Master, who taught His disciples to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. . . . . .Amen."

The world is full of willing people; some willing to work, the rest willing to let them. ---Brice Van Horn Fillmore

Seek Man For Child Kidnapping

WASHINGTON -- Alson Thomas Wahrlich, reportedly armed with a pistol and a surgical scalpel and charged with kidnaping a six-year-old Arizona girl, has been added to the FBI's list of Ten Most Wanted Fugitives.

He allegedly abducted the young child in Tucson, Ariz., April 16, 1964, brutally beat and choked her and sexually molested her before abandoning her in the same city. When investigation reflected that Wahrlich had fled Arizona, FBI assistance to locate him was requested. A federal warrant was issued at Tucson, April 28, 1964, charging him with unlawful interstate flight to avoid prosecution for kidnaping.

Wahrlich, who reportedly has mental blackouts, has been previously imprisoned following conviction for aggravated assault, child molesting and a crime against nature. A prison psychologist has described him as a schizophrenic paranoid and sexual deviate with a history of antisocial behavior. A close relative considers him destructive, untruthful and cruel.

In 1957, he was convicted in Arizona of molesting, beating and choking a five-year-old girl in his ice cream vending truck parked in the desert. He was given sentences of up to five years which he served in the Maricopa County, Ariz., jail, and the Arizona State Penitentiary at Florence.

He served a sentence of three years in the Oklahoma State Penitentiary, at McAlester, upon conviction for committing a crime against nature and was released in Octover, 1963.

He served in the army between February, 1953, and March, 1956, and has reportedly secured a certificate as a student pilot.

Wahrlich was born in Rensselaer County, N.Y., Feb. 4, 1936. He is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 135 to 140 pounds, wears glasses, has blue eyes, brown hair, a medium build and a medium complexion. He has a scar on his left shoulder, a vaccination scar on his left arm, a scar on each side of his abdomen and a tatto of a heart and the name "Cindy" on his left arm. He was married in 1957 and divorced in 1962.

Wahrlich has worked as a truck driver, ranch worker, dishwasher, house trailer repairman, hospital orderly, insurance salesman and ice cream truck vendor. He is said to occasionally drink beer, is interested in guns and strongly prefers traveling by personally owned car.

In addition to a pistol, which he reportedly constantly carries, Wahrlich is said to carry a surgical scalpel in his trouser's pocket. He is considered to be armed and extremely dangerous.

Any person receiving any information concerning the whereabouts of Wahrlich, is requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be located on the first page of local telephone directories.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK., --Second Lieutenant Robert E. England, Headquarters Squadron 97th Combat Support Group, and Staff Sergeant Walter D. Riner, 97th Combat Defense Squadron, have been selected as the Outstanding Officer and Non-commissioned Officer for the 97th Bomb Wing, for the month of May.

Lieutenant England is chief of the quality control branch, for the director of personnel.

His citation states that he has established an outstanding rapport with all squadron commanders, first sergeants and supervisors and has established an outstanding career motivation program.

Through his efforts, the highest retention rates ever at Blytheville have been achieved. The base placed second in Second Air Force for the 10th cycle retention program.

Sergeant Riner is assigned as a communication plotter, element leader and, when needed, as a flight commander for the Combat Defense Sq.

According to his citation, Sergeant Riner's professionalism has received for him on numerous occasions, outstanding comments from inspectors and other officials from higher headquarters.

The citation further states that these qualifications have earned for him the highest respect of both supervisors and subordinates.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK., --The U. S. Air Force Academy, in conjunction with Headquarters Strategic Air Command, has chosen Blytheville AFB to host "Operation Third Lieutenant" for the third consecutive year.

The original concept of sending cadets into the field to observe, first hand, the workings of Air Force units was conceived in early 1957. The general thinking was that it is essential that cadets, prior to their graduation and commissioning, have the opportunity to see the Air Force at work and at leisure to establish a realistic level of expectation of what the Air Force career will be like.

While here, the cadets will perform specific duties for four weeks with their assigned units, and upon completion of this temporary duty, they'll return to the academy. The cadets will be here from June 28 through July 23.

Since its inception, "Operation Third Lieutenant" has been termed successful by all concerned, particularly the cadets who regard the experience as one of the highlights of their four years at the academy.

The cadets assigned to Blytheville AFB are members of the Class of 67. They are the new "second classmen" at the academy which is equivalent to being a junior in college. They will not be here on a tour or a rest, but to look, listen and learn.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. (I John 4:9)

PRAYER: Thou art loving indeed, Lord. Grant me Thy love, its warmth and self-renewing power and force to love others and to live the best for Thee, as I do my work every day. In the name of the Master, who taught His disciples to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. . . . . .Amen."

The world is full of willing people; some willing to work, the rest willing to let them. ---Brice Van Horn Fillmore

Seek Man For Child Kidnapping

WASHINGTON -- Alson Thomas Wahrlich, reportedly armed with a pistol and a surgical scalpel and charged with kidnaping a six-year-old Arizona girl, has been added to the FBI's list of Ten Most Wanted Fugitives.

He allegedly abducted the young child in Tucson, Ariz., April 16, 1964, brutally beat and choked her and sexually molested her before abandoning her in the same city. When investigation reflected that Wahrlich had fled Arizona, FBI assistance to locate him was requested. A federal warrant was issued at Tucson, April 28, 1964, charging him with unlawful interstate flight to avoid prosecution for kidnaping.

Wahrlich, who reportedly has mental blackouts, has been previously imprisoned following conviction for aggravated assault, child molesting and a crime against nature. A prison psychologist has described him as a schizophrenic paranoid and sexual deviate with a history of antisocial behavior. A close relative considers him destructive, untruthful and cruel.

In 1957, he was convicted in Arizona of molesting, beating and choking a five-year-old girl in his ice cream vending truck parked in the desert. He was given sentences of up to five years which he served in the Maricopa County, Ariz., jail, and the Arizona State Penitentiary at Florence.

He served a sentence of three years in the Oklahoma State Penitentiary, at McAlester, upon conviction for committing a crime against nature and was released in October, 1963.

He served in the army between February, 1953, and March, 1956, and has reportedly secured a certificate as a student pilot.

Wahrlich was born in Rensselaer County, N.Y., Feb. 4, 1936. He is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 135 to 140 pounds, wears glasses, has blue eyes, brown hair, a medium build and a medium complexion. He has a scar on his left shoulder, a vaccination scar on his left arm, a scar on each side of his abdomen and a tatto of a heart and the name "Cindy" on his left arm. He was married in 1957 and divorced in 1962.

Wahrlich has worked as a truck driver, ranch worker, dishwasher, house trailer repairman, hospital orderly, insurance salesman and ice cream truck vendor. He is said to occasionally drink beer, is interested in guns and strongly prefers traveling by personally owned car.

In addition to a pistol, which he reportedly constantly carries, Wahrlich is said to carry a surgical scalpel in his trouser's pocket. He is considered to be armed and extremely dangerous.

Any person receiving any information concerning the whereabouts of Wahrlich, is requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be located on the first page of local telephone directories.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK., —Second Lieutenant Robert E. England, Headquarters Squadron 97th Combat Support Group, and Staff Sergeant Walter D. Riner, 97th Combat Defense Squadron, have been selected as the Outstanding Officer and Non-commissioned Officer for the 97th Bomb Wing, for the month of May.

His citation states that he has established an outstanding rapport with all squadron commanders, first sergeants and supervisors and has established an outstanding career motivation program.

Through his efforts, the highest retention rates ever at Blytheville have been achieved. The base placed second in Second Air Force for the 10th cycle retention program.

Sergeant Riner is assigned as a communication plotter, element leader and, when needed, as a flight commander for the Combat Defense Sq.

According to his citation, Sergeant Riner's professionalism has received for him on numerous occasions, outstanding comments from inspectors and other officials from higher headquarters.

The citation further states that these qualifications have earned for him the highest respect of both supervisors and subordinates.

BLYTHEVILLE AFB, ARK., --The U. S. Air Force Academy, in conjunction with Headquarters Strategic Air Command, has chosen Blytheville AFB to host "Operation Third Lieutenant" for the third consecutive year.

The original concept of sending cadets into the field to observe, first hand, the workings of Air Force units was conceived in early 1957. The general thinking was that it is essential that cadets, prior to their graduation and commissioning, have the opportunity to see the Air Force at work and at leisure to establish a realistic level of expectation of what the Air Force career will be like.

While here, the cadets will perform specific duties for four weeks with their assigned units, and upon completion of this temporary duty, they'll return to the academy. The cadets will be here from June 28 through July 23.

Since its inception, "Operation Third Lieutenant" has been termed successful by all concerned, particularly the cadets who regard the experience as one of the highlights of their four years at the academy.

The cadets assigned to Blytheville AFB are members of the Class of 67. They are the new "second classmen" at the academy which is equivalent to being a junior in college. They will not be here on a tour or a rest, but to look, listen and learn.

*Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price P.O.E. East Coast for Opel Kadett 2-door Sedan. Price includes Federal Excise Tax and suggested dealer delivery and handling charge (transportation charges, accessories, optional equipment, state and local taxes additional).

We worked hard to make sure Opel Kadett is worth every penny.

You put in a lot of hours to earn the money. We want to assure you that we kept it in mind when GM built Opel Kadett. Bucket seats are an example. We don't charge extra. The 46-hp engine is another. It seems to have an aversion to gas pumps and repair shops. Your hard-earned money will bring you a 4-speed floor shift, a rugged all-vinyl interior, a windshield washer, even a steering wheel lock, not to mention a front suspension system that never needs lubrication. Go to your Buick-Opel dealer. (The man who makes money talk.) On the way home, put the money you saved in the bank. Ah, peace of mind, it's wonderful.

OPEL KADETT BY BUICK
